President Lauds Senator Flanders' Talk on McCarthy

Eisenhower Declares Stevenson Talked Nonsense When He Said Republican Party Was Split

Washington, March 10 (AP)—President Eisenhower said today Sen. Flanders (R.-Vt.) did a great public service by pointing up the dangers of party-splitting strife in his Senate speech critical of Sen. McCarthy (R.-Wis.).

Eisenhower said he wanted to make it clear he was not issuing any blanket endorsement of Flanders' speech, but also told a news conference:

1. It was "nonsense" for Adlai Stevenson to say the Republican Party is split—"half McCarthy and half Eisenhower."

2. He believes the CBS and NBC networks did the fair and proper thing in giving the Republican Party free network time for a reply to Stevenson while denying it to McCarthy as an individual.

Eisenhower commented that any political speaker might mention critically the names of 20 or more persons and that it would be impossible for the networks to give each of them time for rebuttal.

The White House gave added emphasis to Eisenhower's use of the "nonsense" label for Stevenson's assertion by authorizing its direct quotation. Ordinarily, the President's news conference statements may not be quoted directly.

Grim in Comments

Eisenhower was grim in some of his comments on what Stevenson, 1952 Democratic presidential candidate, said about defense policies in an address at Miami Saturday.

Stevenson had questioned in a Miami party speech whether the "new look" military program with emphasis on atomic and other new weapons is really affording the country the best security.

Asked about that, Eisenhower stamped his foot in emphasis as he said that he is doing nothing in the defense department that he does not believe is for the best interest of the country.

He is not going to be a demagogue about it either, the President said, his face flushed.

Firmly, Eisenhower said that he is as concerned about the security of the country as any single individual could possibly be.

Eisenhower said there had been no procdure change in operations of the Joint Chief of Staff. He said he always dislikes slogans and believes the "new look" tag is not truly descriptive of the military program.

Toward Specific Date

In the previous administrations, he said, the military program had been pointed toward a specific date when the country would be ready to meet any large scale aggression. He said he didn't believe this sort of policy was effective.

What he is asking everybody to remember, the President said, is that the free world is picking up a burden it may have to carry indefinitely.

The country doesn't have to get hysterical with fear about the military danger here, he said.

The subject of Flanders' speech was brought up when a reporter asked Eisenhower whether he sympathized with what Flanders had to say.

The Vermont lawmaker contended in a Senate speech yesterday that McCarthy's tactics in pursuing internal subversion were diverting the country's attention from greater dangers from without. Flanders said too that McCarthy "by intention or through ignorance" was "doing his best to shatter" the Republican party.

Party of Responsibility

The President laughed heartily at the question and said he had been certain he was going to get a query about Flanders' speech, so he had thought about it on the way to the news conference.

The Republican party, Eisenhower commented, now is the party of responsibility, so charged by the people.

He added that when Flanders pointed up the danger of internecine warfare, in situations which magnify the danger of personal aggrandizement — those things which endanger the program of the administration—Flanders is doing a great public service in pointing up such situations.

Eisenhower said also that when a situation develops where you are going three or four directions at one time, well, then, it is just serious.

A reporter asked whether the President didn't feel that the positive aspects of the administration's program ought to be emphasized instead of having so much publicity about investigations.

Eisenhower replied that he doesn't believe negative things promote the happiness of the people. He said the spiritual, cultural and economic welfare of the people should be promoted.

Diane Wells Takes Fatal Amount of Sleeping Pills

Was Accused of Murdering Husband for Love of Musician; Note Was Left

Hollywood, Calif., March 10 (AP)—A beautiful blonde, charged with murder in the slaying of her wealthy husband, has removed herself from the jurisdiction of the courts by taking a lethal dose of sleeping pills.

Now a musician, who claims he was her lover, faces trial alone on the murder charge in Alaska next month.

Police said Mrs. Diane Wells, 31, swallowed 30 powerful sedative tablets and died in her room at the Hollywood Plaza Hotel yesterday.

The distraught woman came here last Jan. 22 for health reasons after being released on $10,000 bail.

She had been arrested in Seattle on a grand jury indictment after she left Alaska.

Accused of Murder

She and jazz drummer Johnny Warren, 33, are accused of murdering her husband, Cecil Wells, 51, wealthy Fairbanks auto dealer and former president of the All-Alaska Chamber of Commerce. He was fatally shot in the Alaska city last Oct. 17.

Mrs. Wells had contended she was beaten senseless by two men who broke into the Wells' Fairbanks home and her husband was killed before she regained consciousness. She sustained facial bruises and blackened eyes.

Warren, free on $5,000 bail, said he and Mrs. Wells had had a love affair, which she denied. She maintained she was innocent of the shooting.

Arrested in Oakland

Warren was arrested in Oakland, Calif., where he told police that at a Fairbanks club Mrs. Wells' eyes "led me to believe she might appreciate attention."

Detectives said Mrs. Wells, without luggage, checked into the hotel here Monday evening.

Officers found a note reading:

"For one thing, I am guilty, too, for even seeing Warren, and if Warren is guilty . . . one thing is for sure, Cecil is dead. And I must be the cause of it, one way or another." The note was signed with a D.

Comstock Will Go To Alaska, Heads Hospital Dentistry

Dr. John A. Comstock, local dentist, will leave March 27 for Anchorage, Alaska, where he will have charge of dentistry in a 400-bed U. S. government hospital.

Dr. Comstock, who served as a captain at Air Force Regional Hospital, No. 1, Coral Gables, Fla., during World War 2, will in his new capacity be working under the Department of the Interior and will have charge of the hospital's newly equipped clinic.

The local dentist expects to travel by train to Seattle, and fly to Anchorage with a stop-over at Juneau.

A graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, Dr. Comstock has practiced dentistry in this city since 1930 except for his period of wartime service. His offices are at 317 Wall street.

Dr. and Mrs. Comstock reside at 317 Lucas avenue with their two sons, Scott, a senior at Kingston High School, and Leslie, a sophomore. Their two daughters are married: Mrs. John Singarella, whose husband expects to begin a tour of active duty as a second lieutenant in the Army, and Mrs. Ford Mattice of Middleburgh. His family will not accompany him to Alaska at this time.

Dr. Comstock is a member of the American Dental Association, the dental staff of Kingston Hospital, Cyprus Temple of Masons, Kingston Kiwanis Club, American Legion, Reserve Officers Association, Men's Club of the First Dutch Church, and the American Rose Society.

No Changes Planned Yet At Rondout

Opinion Given in Letter to Esopus Taxpayers' President by Planning Director

B. A. Lefeve, director of the Bureau of Highway Planning, New York State Department of Public Works, indicated recently that the state will not consider working on any change of the city's approach of the Rondout creek bridge until a study is made of the effects of thruway travel on the city and vicinity.

Lefeve expressed this opinion in a letter to John Grady, president of the Town of Esopus Taxpayers Association, the latter revealed today.

Grady had sent a letter to B. D. Tallamy, state public works superintendent, and it was forwarded to Lefeve, who said: "We are pleased that you recognize the improvements in Kingston traffic conditions which will be brought about by the proposed arterial plan."

Will Be Improved

On the Rondout creek bridge proposal he said: "We know that conditions will be considerably improved at this point when the thruway is in operation, and the northerly connection from the thruway and Route 28 to north Broadway is completed.

After explaining that nothing would be done at the bridge before a study, when the thruway is opened to through travel, he added: "At that time we will certainly consider the requirements for travel between your area and the downtown shopping district in the vicinity of lower Broadway."

Grady in Lefeve's opinion on this, also thanked The Freeman for a recent article on the condition of the Eddyville bridge.

"We have had many comments since it appeared in The Freeman," he said, "and we deeply appreciate your spirit of cooperation in bringing to the attention of your readers, pertinent facts that have much to do with the progress of our county."

Ordered to Appear

New York, March 10 (AP)—Julio Pinto Gandia, leader of Puerto Rican Nationalists in New York, has been ordered to appear today before a federal grand jury investigating the party's terrorist tactics. Gandia, subpoenaed yesterday, is one of more than 100 Puerto Ricans to be called before grand juries here and in Chicago. They will be questioned about the March 1 shooting of five congressmen on the floor of the House of Representatives. Three men and a woman held for this shooting are members of the Puerto Rican Nationalist party. The group's demands for immediate and complete independence have been repeatedly turned down by the island commonwealth's elected assembly.

School for Police

A school of photography of interest to police officers will be held at the court house starting March 15, it was announced today. The school will continue until Friday, March 19, and will be held from 9 a. m., to 5 p. m. daily. Kingston police were notified of the sessions yesterday.

Man Dies in Meadow St. Fire; Two Men Hurt on Thruway

Saugerties Resident Is In Hospital

Frank B. Homans Hurt When Pile Driver Capsizes; Another Is Treated

Frank B. Homans, 49, of RD3, Saugerties, was reported in "fair" condition at Kingston Hospital this morning after a huge steam-driven pile driver capsized on Thruway construction in Tillson shortly before 9 a. m., crashing through two 4,000-volt high tension wires and three telephone wires which service the Rifton area.

Samuel Wollschleger, whose address was tentatively listed as New York, was treated but not admitted.

It was reported that Homans suffered slight burns to the left side of his body and possible internal injuries. Wollschleger was treated for an abrasion of the ear.

A spokesman for the Raymond Company, sub-contractors for a bridge over the Tillson road about a quarter of a mile from the McEvoy Grocery Store, said a fuse must have blown when the high tension wires were severed, that the lines fortunately had "no juice." The fuse, he explained, is a kind of safety device actuated when anything comes in contact with the wires.

Was Booming Down

He said the pile driver was "booming down to drive a sloping pile" when the huge tower began to lean.

Wollschleger, the engineer, managed to leap from the cab before it fell, but Homans, who was acting as fireman, was trapped and "thrown out" when the pile driver crashed to the ground, the spokesman said.

"The whole crew was working around the pile driver. We were lucky no one was hurt."

Homans was thrown out the back end of the cab, it was reported.

"We were looking everywhere for him," the Raymond spokesman said, explaining that it was almost impossible to see anything because of huge clouds of steam rolling from the boiler. "Somebody said, 'He's down by the road.' That's where we found him...He turned off everything before the pile driver fell. It was quick thinking. Not everybody would have thought of that."

Damage Reported

The tower was not damaged apparently but the cab, boiler and operating machinery appeared to have been damaged considerably. The forward end of the steel

Victim Is Identified By Coroner

Owner of House Says Kerosene Container Broke; Could Not Rouse Branin

A body identified as that of Robert William Branin, 54, who had been a patient at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital, was taken from a one-story frame Meadow street house, which was damaged by fire last night.

Branin, a native of New Haven, Conn., had lived at 124 Main street, Poughkeepsie, before he came to this city. He was apparently known here as Joseph Branin.

Coroner Francis J. McCardle described the body as "charred remains," and information obtained by the police indicated that the man had been drinking and was asleep on the floor of the small house, occupied by Frank Carter, Jr., 55, who is known as "Dutch." Carter knew his visitor only as Joe, he said.

Carter told Detective Frank Sammons and Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy that a container of kerosene broke as he was about to place it on the rack of a two-burner stove, and the mishap set fire to the place.

Ran Out to Sound Alarm

After he had tried unsuccessfully to get the sleeping man out of the place, Carter said, he ran out to sound the alarm, but a box had been pulled soon after he got outside. He also said that kerosene which had spilled on his clothing had caught fire and he quenched the flames by rolling on the floor.

Officers Joseph Kivlan and Hydrect Armstrong arrested Carter on Hasbrouck avenue near East Union street on a charge of public intoxication some time after the alarm was sounded. He was sentenced to 10 days in the county jail when he appeared this morning before City Judge Raymond J. Mino.

Fire Chief Murphy said firemen found the body in the building when they arrived at the fire. At that time, he said, flames were lashing out high above the building.

An alarm was sounded from Box 3131 at Broadway and Spring street at 11:56 p. m. This was followed by another from Box 2121, East Union and Chambers street, and in the interim Central station was notified by a telephone call. Officers Anthony R. Turck and Everett Emmick investigated first reports of the fire.

Authorities thought at first that it was Carter, who had been unable to escape the fire, but Sgt. Lemuel Howard, at police headquarters, noted the arrest of Carter at 12:40 a. m. Howard had dispatched Officers Harold Bowers, Crawford Millham, Joseph Kivlin and Hydrect Armstrong to the fire, and Lt. William Messing went there to take charge.

Only Clothing Identifiable

Coroner McCardle said the only clothing identifiable were parts of a maroon shirt, a navy blue sweater and long underwear. Police noted two partial dental plates, a gold tooth, and a tatoo mark on the right arm. A pint of whiskey known as White Mule was found on the body, Chief Murphy said.

The fire destroyed the entire interior of the house and it contents.

Carter, when first questioned by the authorities, indicated he was under the impression that it was earlier in the night when the kerosene container broke as he was near the stove with it.

Positive Announcement

Coroner McCardle announced positive identification of Branin at about noon today. He said he was the son of the late John and Margaret Meskell Branin, his wife, Josephine Seamon Branin, is deceased, and he is survived by a step-daughter, Mrs. Glady Moon, of the Rosendale road. He was scheduled to return to the county hospital today, the coroner said.

The Rev. Edward I. Farrelly of St. Mary's Church responded to a call in the event he were needed for last rites.

The two alarms called out Central and Cornell equipment, Union and Rapid Hose companies. Rapid was later sent to cover at Central station until return of men and equipment there.

Curran Says He Got Only $2,000

Secretary of State Reports Before Moreland Commission

New York, March 10 (AP)—Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran testified today that he personally netted only $2,000 of a $10,000 fee his law firm received in 1949 from harness track interests.

Curran gave the testimony before the Moreland Act Commission probing political ties and huge profits of the state's harness race industry.

He took the stand at his own request, in order to amplify testimony he gave at a previous session.

In the earlier appearance, his testimony indicated that he received a $10,000 fee simply for performing an introduction of two individuals as a preliminary to establishment of the Yonkers Raceway.

Later, however, he issued a statement saying his brief testimony had been subject to unfair interpretation. He asserted that the fee actually went to his law firm and represented a year's work by that concern.

He added that his position as secretary of state in no way precluded his firm from doing the work.

500 Shares Requested

Curran also had testified earlier that 500 shares of stock in the Algam Corp., which owns Yonkers Raceway, was registered in the

Committee Recommends Code for State Legislators

Dulles Says Latins May Be Correct

Secretary Says, However, No Republic Should Be Arbitrary

Caracas, Venezuela, March 10 (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles told Latin Americans today they may be right "in saying the United States should make some changes in its economic policies, but down this way, he said, government "plays a much more important role in economic affairs than we think desirable for ourselves."

No republic should expect another to abandon its economic creed, Dulles said in a prepared address to the 10th Inter-American Conference.

No Departure Planned

The secretary indicated President Eisenhower's administration has no intention of departing from its philosophy that the United States should operate, as Dulles said, within a free enterprise economy, but added there are some matters which "we are prepared to consider open-mindedly."

His address was not on the conference schedule and apparently came after some differences of opinion developed within the U. S.

No Specific Penalties Proposed; Curbs Are Urged on Public Servants

Albany, March 10 (AP) — The Lockwood "purity" committee today recommended a comprehensive code of ethics for legislators and state officials and employes but made no specific penalty provisions for violations.

It also urged curbs, with teeth, on public servants conducting private business with the state.

Legislation to carry out the proposals, contained in a report to Gov. Dewey and the Legislature, was introduced in both Houses and was expected to receive approval.

Party officers were ignored except for a recommendation that they be forbidden to hold judicial or prosecuting posts.

A discordant note marked the windup of the committee's work. Although all 12 members approved the report, two filed a "supplemental memorandum" in which they said in essence that the proposed legislation should be only the beginning.

The two were Richard H. Amberg, publisher of the Syracuse Post-Standard, and Franklin R. Brown of Buffalo, former president of the New York State Bar Assn.

Lockwood Angered

The memorandum, telegraphed to Albany by Amberg, vice chairman of the committee, angered Charles C. Lockwood of Brooklyn, chairman.

Lockwood refused to make the memorandum a part of the report. He accused Amberg of seeking personal publicity. He told newsmen:

"I don't like people who agree to sign a report and then hedge on it. I think it is an outrage for anyone to treat a chairman that way."

Lockwood said that Amberg had asked that the contents of the memo be incorporated in the report and that the committee had rejected the request. Lockwood said all the points covered in the memo were in the report.

The chairman denied that the report was a watered-down version of the program sought by Dewey.

It was clear, however, that

Snyder Says Puerto Ricans To Strike Again in 20 Days

Sounding a stern warning that the next 20 days will see a recurrence, perhaps the most decisive so far, of the Puerto Rican incidents in our nation, Frederic Snyder delivered an electrifying address to the Kingston National Dinner Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel last night. He responded to a call on five minutes notice when the scheduled speaker failed to arrive, to emphasize that the two assassination plots reflect only the actions of a small group, and not the country as a whole, and that thinking should be guided by this fact.

In his survey of important worthwhile headlines in the news, Snyder, well known lecturer and news analyst from Kingston, cited the "calm address of Senator Flanders" and his comments on the McCarthy situation, which is causing the U. S. to lose "morale in Britain and Canada" by his "verbal lynchings."

Displayed Duplicate of Transistor

The really "big news" today is the announcement of "the release of electrical energy from atomic waste." And he brought along a duplicate of the miraculous transistor that's made this release of energy a blueprint come true. Not a weapon factor, this "earring-small" object is entirely for the assumption of electrical energy, and is in use already in some factories.

With the tremendous amount of mechanical energy now at man's disposal through the genius of present-day science, Snyder asked for an equal amount of moral energy to go along with it. He said that God is now ready to bless man as he has never been blessed before through the discoveries of science, but that man is not yet ready fully to receive this shower of blessings. Settling disputes through wars and strikes has not advanced, but rather slowed down any advance in the fields.

Cross at Top of World

Snyder cited the conquest of Mt. Everest as an example of the recognition of the place of spiritual values in world affairs. Sir Edmund Hillary allowed Sherpa Tensing to make his offering to Budda first, then placed the cross upon the peak before placing national flags, assuring "at Easter, the cross will be on the highest point in our world," yet respecting another man's religious beliefs.

Snyder urged that everyone make his own atmosphere of peace, and made a plea that if those in the "world who claim to be Christians would only be Christian," many problems could be solved.

From the highest peak reached to the lowest point, 13,000 feet into the ocean, man has progressed only through the wonders of science. Snyder told of the French scientists who made the amazing descent into the black waters off Africa only to find sea monsters larger than their own craft, fragments of stars lighted in an inky ocean by luminescent bodies and a paradise world of strange cathedrals and avenues of sea plants in a depth lower than any man before them had reached to tell about.

O. & W. Director Makes Plea For Improvement of Rt. 209

Deyo W. Johnson, a director of the O. & W. Railway Co., and head of two businesses which "depend upon" it, in a recent letter to Bertram D. Tallamy, state public works superintendent, made a plea to improve Route 209 and predicted that the O. & W. will stay in business for some time.

The current outlook for the Kingston and Port Jervis sections of the railroad, he said, is that they will stay in service "in the forseeable future," and therefore could not be taken over as a new road bed for Route 209.

Meanwhile, he proposed that since the condition of 209 "has become frightfully inadequate and dangerous," that "every effort will be made to put Highway 209 in proper state to handle the growing volume of traffic, both local and long distance, that is using this important highway."

Johnson noted that in the March 4 issue of The Ellenville Press "there is a reprint of a recent letter which you (Tallamy) wrote to the Hon. Thomas C. Desmond in reference to the necessity for improving Route 209."

The letter also noted: "You also state that you are considering the relocation of this highway to the Kingston and Port Jervis branches of the N. Y. O. & W. railway should these branches be abandoned.

Johnson said he tried to keep

Frank B. Homans Hurt When Pile Driver Capsizes; Another Is Treated

Frank B. Homans, 49, of RD3, Saugerties, was reported in "fair" condition at Kingston Hospital this morning after a huge steam-driven pile driver capsized on Thruway construction in Tillson shortly before 9 a. m., crashing through two 4,000-volt high tension wires and three telephone wires which service the Rifton area.

Samuel Wollschleger, whose address was tentatively listed as New York, was treated but not admitted.

It was reported that Homans suffered slight burns to the left side of his body and possible internal injuries. Wollschleger was treated for an abrasion of the ear.

A spokesman for the Raymond Company, sub-contractors for a bridge over the Tillson road about a quarter of a mile from the McEvoy Grocery Store, said a fuse must have blown when the high tension wires were severed, that the lines fortunately had "no juice." The fuse, he explained, is a kind of safety device actuated when anything comes in contact with the wires.

Was Booming Down

He said the pile driver was "booming down to drive a sloping pile" when the huge tower began to lean.

Wollschleger, the engineer, managed to leap from the cab before it fell, but Homans, who was acting as fireman, was trapped and "thrown out" when the pile driver crashed to the ground, the spokesman said.

"The whole crew was working around the pile driver. We were lucky no one was hurt."

Homans was thrown out the back end of the cab, it was reported.

"We were looking everywhere for him," the Raymond spokesman said, explaining that it was almost impossible to see anything because of huge clouds of steam rolling from the boiler. "Somebody said, 'He's down by the road.' That's where we found him...He turned off everything before the pile driver fell. It was quick thinking. Not everybody would have thought of that."

Damage Reported

The tower was not damaged apparently but the cab, boiler and operating machinery appeared to have been damaged considerably. The forward end of the steel

Victim Is Identified By Coroner

Owner of House Says Kerosene Container Broke; Could Not Rouse Branin

A body identified as that of Robert William Branin, 54, who had been a patient at the Ulster County Tuberculosis Hospital, was taken from a one-story frame Meadow street house, which was damaged by fire last night.

Branin, a native of New Haven, Conn., had lived at 124 Main street, Poughkeepsie, before he came to this city. He was apparently known here as Joseph Branin.

Coroner Francis J. McCardle described the body as "charred remains," and information obtained by the police indicated that the man had been drinking and was asleep on the floor of the small house, occupied by Frank Carter, Jr., 55, who is known as "Dutch." Carter knew his visitor only as Joe, he said.

Carter told Detective Frank Sammons and Fire Chief Joseph L. Murphy that a container of kerosene broke as he was about to place it on the rack of a two-burner stove, and the mishap set fire to the place.

Ran Out to Sound Alarm

After he had tried unsuccessfully to get the sleeping man out of the place, Carter said, he ran out to sound the alarm, but a box had been pulled soon after he got outside. He also said that kerosene which had spilled on his clothing had caught fire and he quenched the flames by rolling on the floor.

Officers Joseph Kivlan and Hydrect Armstrong arrested Carter on Hasbrouck avenue near East Union street on a charge of public intoxication some time after the alarm was sounded. He was sentenced to 10 days in the county jail when he appeared this morning before City Judge Raymond J. Mino.

Fire Chief Murphy said firemen found the body in the building when they arrived at the fire. At that time, he said, flames were lashing out high above the building.

An alarm was sounded from Box 3131 at Broadway and Spring street at 11:56 p. m. This was followed by another from Box 2121, East Union and Chambers street, and in the interim Central station was notified by a telephone call. Officers Anthony R. Turck and Everett Emmick investigated first reports of the fire.

Authorities thought at first that it was Carter, who had been unable to escape the fire, but Sgt. Lemuel Howard, at police headquarters, noted the arrest of Carter at 12:40 a. m. Howard had dispatched Officers Harold Bowers, Crawford Millham, Joseph Kivlin and Hydrect Armstrong to the fire, and Lt. William Messing went there to take charge.

Only Clothing Identifiable

Coroner McCardle said the only clothing identifiable were parts of a maroon shirt, a navy blue sweater and long underwear. Police noted two partial dental plates, a gold tooth, and a tatoo mark on the right arm. A pint of whiskey known as White Mule was found on the body, Chief Murphy said.

The fire destroyed the entire interior of the house and it contents.

Carter, when first questioned by the authorities, indicated he was under the impression that it was earlier in the night when the kerosene container broke as he was near the stove with it.

Positive Announcement

Coroner McCardle announced positive identification of Branin at about noon today. He said he was the son of the late John and Margaret Meskell Branin, his wife, Josephine Seamon Branin, is deceased, and he is survived by a step-daughter, Mrs. Glady Moon, of the Rosendale road. He was scheduled to return to the county hospital today, the coroner said.

The Rev. Edward I. Farrelly of St. Mary's Church responded to a call in the event he were needed for last rites.

The two alarms called out Central and Cornell equipment, Union and Rapid Hose companies. Rapid was later sent to cover at Central station until return of men and equipment there.

Curran Says He Got Only $2,000

Secretary of State Reports Before Moreland Commission

New York, March 10 (AP)—Secretary of State Thomas J. Curran testified today that he personally netted only $2,000 of a $10,000 fee his law firm received in 1949 from harness track interests.

Curran gave the testimony before the Moreland Act Commission probing political ties and huge profits of the state's harness race industry.

He took the stand at his own request, in order to amplify testimony he gave at a previous session.

In the earlier appearance, his testimony indicated that he received a $10,000 fee simply for performing an introduction of two individuals as a preliminary to establishment of the Yonkers Raceway.

Later, however, he issued a statement saying his brief testimony had been subject to unfair interpretation. He asserted that the fee actually went to his law firm and represented a year's work by that concern.

He added that his position as secretary of state in no way precluded his firm from doing the work.

500 Shares Requested

Curran also had testified earlier that 500 shares of stock in the Algam Corp., which owns Yonkers Raceway, was registered in the

Committee Recommends Code for State Legislators

No Specific Penalties Proposed; Curbs Are Urged on Public Servants

Albany, March 10 (AP) — The Lockwood "purity" committee today recommended a comprehensive code of ethics for legislators and state officials and employes but made no specific penalty provisions for violations.

It also urged curbs, with teeth, on public servants conducting private business with the state.

Legislation to carry out the proposals, contained in a report to Gov. Dewey and the Legislature, was introduced in both Houses and was expected to receive approval.

Party officers were ignored except for a recommendation that they be forbidden to hold judicial or prosecuting posts.

A discordant note marked the windup of the committee's work. Although all 12 members approved the report, two filed a "supplemental memorandum" in which they said in essence that the proposed legislation should be only the beginning.

The two were Richard H. Amberg, publisher of the Syracuse Post-Standard, and Franklin R. Brown of Buffalo, former president of the New York State Bar Assn.

Lockwood Angered

The memorandum, telegraphed to Albany by Amberg, vice chairman of the committee, angered Charles C. Lockwood of Brooklyn, chairman.

Lockwood refused to make the memorandum a part of the report. He accused Amberg of seeking personal publicity. He told newsmen:

"I don't like people who agree to sign a report and then hedge on it. I think it is an outrage for anyone to treat a chairman that way."

Lockwood said that Amberg had asked that the contents of the memo be incorporated in the report and that the committee had rejected the request. Lockwood said all the points covered in the memo were in the report.

The chairman denied that the report was a watered-down version of the program sought by Dewey.

It was clear, however, that

Dulles Says Latins May Be Correct

Secretary Says, However, No Republic Should Be Arbitrary

Caracas, Venezuela, March 10 (AP) — Secretary of State Dulles told Latin Americans today they may be right "in saying the United States should make some changes in its economic policies, but down this way, he said, government "plays a much more important role in economic affairs than we think desirable for ourselves."

No republic should expect another to abandon its economic creed, Dulles said in a prepared address to the 10th Inter-American Conference.

No Departure Planned

The secretary indicated President Eisenhower's administration has no intention of departing from its philosophy that the United States should operate, as Dulles said, within a free enterprise economy, but added there are some matters which "we are prepared to consider open-mindedly."

His address was not on the conference schedule and apparently came after some differences of opinion developed within the U. S.

Snyder Says Puerto Ricans To Strike Again in 20 Days

Sounding a stern warning that the next 20 days will see a recurrence, perhaps the most decisive so far, of the Puerto Rican incidents in our nation, Frederic Snyder delivered an electrifying address to the Kingston National Dinner Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel last night. He responded to a call on five minutes notice when the scheduled speaker failed to arrive, to emphasize that the two assassination plots reflect only the actions of a small group, and not the country as a whole, and that thinking should be guided by this fact.

In his survey of important worthwhile headlines in the news, Snyder, well known lecturer and news analyst from Kingston, cited the "calm address of Senator Flanders" and his comments on the McCarthy situation, which is causing the U. S. to lose "morale in Britain and Canada" by his "verbal lynchings."

Displayed Duplicate of Transistor

The really "big news" today is the announcement of "the release of electrical energy from atomic waste." And he brought along a duplicate of the miraculous transistor that's made this release of energy a blueprint come true. Not a weapon factor, this "earring-small" object is entirely for the assumption of electrical energy, and is in use already in some factories.

With the tremendous amount of mechanical energy now at man's disposal through the genius of present-day science, Snyder asked for an equal amount of moral energy to go along with it. He said that God is now ready to bless man as he has never been blessed before through the discoveries of science, but that man is not yet ready fully to receive this shower of blessings. Settling disputes through wars and strikes has not advanced, but rather slowed down any advance in the fields.

Cross at Top of World

Snyder cited the conquest of Mt. Everest as an example of the recognition of the place of spiritual values in world affairs. Sir Edmund Hillary allowed Sherpa Tensing to make his offering to Budda first, then placed the cross upon the peak before placing national flags, assuring "at Easter, the cross will be on the highest point in our world," yet respecting another man's religious beliefs.

Snyder urged that everyone make his own atmosphere of peace, and made a plea that if those in the "world who claim to be Christians would only be Christian," many problems could be solved.

From the highest peak reached to the lowest point, 13,000 feet into the ocean, man has progressed only through the wonders of science. Snyder told of the French scientists who made the amazing descent into the black waters off Africa only to find sea monsters larger than their own craft, fragments of stars lighted in an inky ocean by luminescent bodies and a paradise world of strange cathedrals and avenues of sea plants in a depth lower than any man before them had reached to tell about.

O. & W. Director Makes Plea For Improvement of Rt. 209

Deyo W. Johnson, a director of the O. & W. Railway Co., and head of two businesses which "depend upon" it, in a recent letter to Bertram D. Tallamy, state public works superintendent, made a plea to improve Route 209 and predicted that the O. & W. will stay in business for some time.

The current outlook for the Kingston and Port Jervis sections of the railroad, he said, is that they will stay in service "in the forseeable future," and therefore could not be taken over as a new road bed for Route 209.

Meanwhile, he proposed that since the condition of 209 "has become frightfully inadequate and dangerous," that "every effort will be made to put Highway 209 in proper state to handle the growing volume of traffic, both local and long distance, that is using this important highway."

Johnson noted that in the March 4 issue of The Ellenville Press "there is a reprint of a recent letter which you (Tallamy) wrote to the Hon. Thomas C. Desmond in reference to the necessity for improving Route 209."

The letter also noted: "You also state that you are considering the relocation of this highway to the Kingston and Port Jervis branches of the N. Y. O. & W. railway should these branches be abandoned.

Johnson said he tried to keep

Ruling Reversed In Rhodes Case

The Appellate Division, Second department, has reversed a judgment of conviction and ordered a new trial for Harold C. Rhodes, 35-year-old former East Fishkill farmer, who was convicted in December 1952, of first degree grand larceny, in the Dutchess county "mystery novel cow case."

Rhodes was convicted of the theft of 12 cows and heifers belonging to Mrs. Favoretta DeMattio of East Fishkill. He had insisted the cows were destroyed by fire which burned the barn on the Gladys Ryan farm in the town of Clinton on February 20, 1952. Philip Korn of Kerhonkson represented Rhodes and argued the appeal.

Reversal of the conviction and a new trial was ordered by the Appellate Division on the grounds that County Judge Schwartz in his charge to the jury had referred to two written statements by Rhodes as "confessions." The higher court ruled the characterization was "prejudicial error and requires a new trial."

Rhodes was sentenced to a term of from 1½ to 3 years in prison and served 10 months before being freed from Wallkill Prison on a certificate of reasonable doubt. Bail in the sum of $3,500 was fixed pending appeal. The appeal was argued last November by Mr. Korn.

District Attorney Baratta may take the case to the State Court of Appeals.

Vacation Bible School Planned

Plans for the second annual Union Daily Vacation Bible School in the uptown area were announced today, following a meeting of representatives from uptown churches Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist Church. The school will be held July 6 to July 17 and is open to all children of the area.

Miss Patricia, director of religious education for the Old Dutch Church, is chairman of the planning committee. The school will follow the same plan as the one held last summer with each department meeting in a different church. Courses will be offered in three age groups: kindergarten, primary and Junior. Should the demand arise, courses will be added for nursery and junior high.

Members of the committee are: Mrs. Richard Holbrook, Miss Ethel Hull, Mrs. Casper Souers, Mrs. Reynolds Van Keuren, The Rev. Dr. Ralph M. Houston, co-director of last year's school, and the Rev. Mr. Donald E. Brown. Representatives from other cooperating churches will be announced later.

The school is a joint project of the uptown churches, offerings from the Union Lenten Services being used for the conduct and support of the Daily Vacation Bible School.

Bills in Legislature

Albany, March 10 (AP)—A sweeping revision of New York's "big truck" laws was before the Legislature today, aimed at promoting safety, reducing road wear and relieving traffic congestion.

Meanwhile, Gov. Dewey signed a dozen bills into law, and the Legislature plowed through a mass of minor measures.

The truck bills, submitted yesterday, also are designed to simplify administration of the state's weight-distance tax law.

The legislation would:

1. Reduce from 50 to 45 feet the maximum legal length of tractor-trailers, effective in 1960.

2. Set 65,000 pounds as the top gross weight on the heaviest type of trucks. There is no statutory limit now.

3. Scrap the "consecutive three-axle" portion of the bridge restriction formula, which allows across bridges rear-tandem tractor-trailers carrying 57,000 pounds and single rear axle vehicles carrying 53,000 pounds.

4. Permit a moderate increase in cargo weights on tandem axle tractor-trailers.

More Braking Surface

Bertram D. Tallamy, state public works superintendent, said the rear-tandem axles would provide more brake lining surface and reduce brake failures, as well as permit a lower center of gravity on trucks.

Tallamy said the 65,000-pound gross weight limit would mean cheaper transportation costs to the consumer and permit four trailers to carrying the same load that five now carry.

Among the bills Dewey signed were those to:

Allow automobiles registered in more than one state to display all the license plates, establish a center for treating young male delinquents who fail to respond to conventional care, allow trucks to use only until Jan. 15 the license plate for the previous year, and require dealers in second-hand automobiles to put the cars in condition to meet standards set by the vehicle and traffic law.

The Senate gave final approval to a measure that would require optometrists to have four years of professional training leading to a doctor's degree. The required two years of pre-professional training would be unchanged.

To Set Qualifications

Final approval came in the Senate on a bill to set qualifications for the state commissioner of mental hygiene.

To be commissioner, a licensed physician would need to have at least 10 years of practice treating mentally disturbed persons, with half of that time spent as the head of a public institution treating such persons.

The sponsor of the bill, Republican Assemblywoman Genesta Strong of Plandome, said the Legislation has been introduced upon request of the Mental Hygiene Department.

E. David Wiley, associate attorney for the department, said the measure would spell out, for the first time, the commissioner qualifications. The present commissioner, Dr. Newton Bigelow, meets the qualifications, Wiley said.

Child Clinic

A child health conference conducted by the Ulster County Health Department will be held at the clinic rooms, 25 East O'Reilly street on March 16 from 1:30 to 3:30 p. m. These clinics are limited to infant and preschool children for the purpose of administering immunizations for smallpox, diphtheria, tetanus and whooping cough. They are for the maintenance of health and prevention of disease, not for the care of the sick child.

Ruling Reversed In Rhodes Case

The Appellate Division, Second department, has reversed a judgment of conviction and ordered a new trial for Harold C. Rhodes, 35-year-old former East Fishkill farmer, who was convicted in December 1952, of first degree grand larceny, in the Dutchess county "mystery novel cow case."

Rhodes was convicted of the theft of 12 cows and heifers belonging to Mrs. Favoretta DeMattio of East Fishkill. He had insisted the cows were destroyed by fire which burned the barn on the Gladys Ryan farm in the town of Clinton on February 20, 1952. Philip Korn of Kerhonkson represented Rhodes and argued the appeal.

Reversal of the conviction and a new trial was ordered by the Appellate Division on the grounds that County Judge Schwartz in his charge to the jury had referred to two written statements by Rhodes as "confessions." The higher court ruled the characterization was "prejudicial error and requires a new trial."

Rhodes was sentenced to a term of from 1½ to 3 years in prison and served 10 months before being freed from Wallkill Prison on a certificate of reasonable doubt. Bail in the sum of $3,500 was fixed pending appeal. The appeal was argued last November by Mr. Korn.

District Attorney Baratta may take the case to the State Court of Appeals.

SPACE PROBLEMS

Since the advent of television children have been captivated by the idea of conquering space. Youngsters who once worshipped at the shrine of movie cowboys now focus their attention on "space" adventure programs and there has been a phenomenal sale of toy rocket ships, space helmets and other equipment designed to turn the backyard into a launching platform for a ship to the moon.

All this was very well when it was confined to the imaginings of children. But every day there are news stories which indicate that travel to other planets is not an ideal confined to the youngsters. Reputable scientists, men who hesitate to make startling statements, are taking the idea quite seriously.

Recently we read of the armed forces conducting searches through the skies for tiny earth satellites which might be used as stepping stones to the stars. Such satellites would prove of use as launching platforms for missiles in time of war. In peace time they might hold the key to man's conquest of space.

All this is very disquieting. Just about the time that we have adjusted to the age of the automobile and the airplane, new concepts appear for us to accept. It took us a long time to get used to carrying our sunglasses and to remember to keep our temper in check when parking spaces are not available. How will we ever learn to live with space helmets and rocket ships?

A STRONG JAPAN

There has been a great deal of pressure by certain factions in Japan to secure the withdrawal of American troops. Despite the fact that Japan is in no position to defend itself and cannot hope to be for a long time, some Japanese politicians have made political capital of anti-American sentiment.

Premier Shigeru Yoshida, a wise and able man, has taken a positive stand in favor of the continued presence of American troops in Japan. In a recent speech he made clear his belief that communism in Asia is a menace to a free and independent Japan and that his country cannot hope for any security without a strong alliance with America.

It is a paradox that Japan, once one of the most militaristic states in history, now tends strongly toward pacifism. Many of the Japanese who do not wish the country to rearm or to cooperate with American defense ideas are not in sympathy with communism. They simply do not want their country to fight again, whatever the reason.

These misguided Japanese do not realize the difference between building strength for aggression and building it for defense. A strong Japan is an effective deterrent to any large scale war in Asia—a weak Japan would be an invitation to the Reds to start trouble there.

Premier Yoshida has guided the destiny of Japan for five years. It may be hoped that he will continue in power. His wisdom and foresight have made him one of our most valuable allies.

Tortoise racing has become a favorite sport for tourists to the Virgin Islands. If this seems rather slow, it should be remembered that according to the fables of Aesop, on one occasion a slow-moving tortoise beat a hoppity-jumpity swift running hare.

POSTHUMOUS AMERICAN

Henry Litmanowitz died of wounds he suffered in Korea fighting for the United States. It was his dearest wish that he should become a citizen of the country for which he gave his life. President Eisenhower recently signed a bill granting him posthumous citizenship.

Litmanowitz was only twenty-one years old at the time of his death. He came here from Germany in 1949 and entered the army in 1951. In September of 1952 he was killed.

Growing up in Germany, Litmanowitz knew what tyranny was. He also knew what America was and he loved his adopted land. It is heartwarming to know that at least in death he gained his wish to be listed as a citizen of that land. He paid heavily for the privilege, as millions of Americans before him did.

Our nation will continue to move forward toward greater freedom and dignity for men. Henry Litmanowitz, American, contributed to that future progress.

'These Days'

By GEORGE SOKOLSKY

ROUND AND ROUND IT GOES

I am often told that people are tired of politics, that they are weary of the constant chatter of politicians, that they would prefer to escape from it all. Of course, it is possible to escape from politics by going to one of those Iron Curtain countries where you can get shot for even thinking politically. Hereabouts, politics remains a continuing sport. Every other year somebody comes up for election for Federal office and there are always State and local offices to be filled and the excitement is always high.

Now up in Maine, which is a kind of solemn State, Robert L. Jones is being pitted against Senator Margaret Chase Smith in the Republican Primaries. Whoever wins the Republican Primaries in Maine is likely to be elected, because, generally speaking, the Republicans prevail in that State. Occasionally, they do not and that becomes nationally exciting because the adage that as Maine goes, so the country goes, is still believed.

The reason anybody runs against the learned lady is that Senator Margaret Chase Smith never could quite decide whether she is Republican or Democrat, because she voted her conscience, which can be variable. It is therefore believed that there is a fair chance to beat the lady in the primaries, although not a certain one.

Robert Jones comes of French-Canadian and Yankee stock. If elected, he would probably be the first Senator of French-Canadian ancestry and in Maine, particularly in the northern end, that is politics. At any rate, the potato farmers and the fishermen would take it seriously. He is a graduate of Bates College and has been active in alumni work.

Jones has recently been associated with Senator Charles Potter of Michigan, who is embarrassed by his running against a colleague, so Potter let Jones go, which the latter was going to do anyhow. This may prove to be more embarrassing to Potter than Senator Smith's wrath because Jones is a particular favorite of Senator McCarthy.

In Illinois, where Senator Paul Douglas, the learned economist, runs for re-election as a Democrat, the Republicans think so well of their chances that about seven of them are trying in the primaries. Among them are General Julius Klein, the public relations counsel, who is a friend of General Douglas MacArthur, and Edward A. Hayes, who years ago was National Commander of the American Legion.

Hayes gained fame by actively opposing the recognition of Soviet Russia in 1933 and, as head of the American Legion, going to Franklin D. Roosevelt to lay his opposition on the line. This was a daring thing to do in the atmosphere of the time and gives Hayes a record of anti-Stalinism which many a Johnny-come-lately must envy.

Whether the Republicans will win in Illinois or Paul Douglas will keep his seat is for the voters to decide in far off November, but meanwhile there will be an astonishing amount of politics, vituperation, excitement and anguish. Sensitivity there is not likely to be much of, for that is a new trait in Washington where many grown men dislike being slapped on their bare wrists.

I do not yet know what is to happen in New Hampshire. It has been suggested that the White House Keeper of the Gate, Sherman Adams, expects to run in the Republican Primaries against Senator Styles Bridges. Adams was Governor of New Hampshire before he went to work for the President. He has recently made a speech or two to project his personality before the people and he used the term, "Fear Deal," which I thought was very smart of him, but it did not take.

Most Republicans will be very annoyed with Sherman Adams if he tries to oust Styles Bridges, who is a very big man in the Senate. Adams, rightly or wrongly, is disliked among Republicans because he gets all the blame for everything that goes wrong. If no one else is accounted for, Adams is accused. He is in the awful position once held by Raymond Moley, Rexford Guy Tugwell, Tommy Corcoran and Harry Hopkins. It was probably true about Hopkins. As for Adams, he would do better if he ran, say after 1956, when his virtues can catch up with him and somebody else is the whipping boy.

Well, this is politics and make the most of it.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

METRAZOL HELPS ELDERLY PATIENTS

There are three methods of shock treatment, all of which have cleared up mental disturbances in many cases. These methods are insulin, metrazol and electric shock. That the drug, metrazol, is helpful in other physical disturbances in the elderly is stated by Drs. Joseph O. Smigel, Lawrence A. Serhus, and Samuel Barmak in the Journal of the Medical Society of New Jersey.

"The problem of loss of appetite in the aged becomes a serious one, especially in large institutions where menus cannot be individualized. The care of older people is further complicated by states of apathy, apprehension, disorientation, and fatigue so often found in such a group."

Metrazol proved beneficial in improving the appetite, blood picture, and general condition in a group of 20 patients in a chronic disease sanatorium. This drug stimulates breathing and circulation of the blood and thus reduces the "gone" feeling due to lack of oxygen in the blood and increases the general well-being of the patient. Metrazol is stable, non-toxic (not poisonous) and does not accumulate in the system even when given for a considerable length of time. The absorption of metrazol, whether gven by mouth or injection, is good.

"Metrazol is administered in a dose of 0.2 gms. four times a day. If there is no improvement after a month, the dose is increased to 0.3 gms. four times a day. Under such management almost all patients showed improved appetite. Hemoglobin (iron), red, and also white cell count rose. The disorientation (loss of knowledge of his whereabouts) disappears. Patients who had lost control of their bowel and bladder frequently regained this control by use of metrazol. Another favorable response to its use is that the blood pressure falls significantly, especially in those who have high blood pressure."

"Many patients previously bedridden become able to walk about and are able to care for their own needs." This being able to walk about and look after their own needs means much to physicians, nurses and attendants in an institution where the patients are all "chronics," many of them bedridden.

A few years ago it was found that insulin, used to give shock treatment to mental patients, not only increased the appetite of mental patients but also increased the appetite in children and adults who were not mental patients.

It may be that electrical treatment may also help these mental patients by increasing appetite, increasing circulation and lowering the blood pressure as it may the general well-being of nonmental patients.

Washington—(NEA)—Just as the final votes on the Bricker amendment were about to be taken in the U. S. Senate, the United Nations Commission on Human Rights convened in New York with the announced intention of completing work on its much discussed human-rights covenant.

The timing couldn't have been worse, although there is probably more misunderstanding of what this human-rights fight is all about than on any of the other highly controversial issues raised in the UN. The official U. S. government position on it is not well known.

One of the principal reasons advanced for the necessity of passing Ohio Sen. John W. Brickers' proposed constitutional amendment to limit the force of international treaties as internal U. S. law had been a fear of this UN covenant on human rights.

The fear of the temporarily defeated Bricker amendment supporters had been that the covenant would impose on the United States "guarantees" that every man and woman had a right to work, equal pay for equal work, trade-union membership, social security, adequate living standards, free education, and protection for mothers.

Desirable as such ideals may be, they were criticized as impossible or impractical of attainment by government decree. And from this criticism arose much of the fear of the UN as a "world government," imposing laws on member countries by international agreement.

The UN Commission on Human Rights has been trying to draft its covenant ever since 1946. Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt was head of the commission until 1950. It was under her chairmanship, in 1948, that the first Declaration of Human Rights was drawn up.

Bars Discrimination

Among the standards were equality of rights to life, liberty and security of persons, to marry, to own property, to freedom of thought, conscience and assembly. Bars against discrimination for any reason, against slavery and against torture were included.

Between this concept and the present day, the entire train of events got pretty well off the track. The Russians rejected the Declaration of Human Rights of 1948 but took part in the commission's first two attempts to draft a covenant, based on the declaration, in 1950 and 1951.

In drafting the covenant, the Communists expanded the original concept to include a number of economic, social and cultural principles which had nothing to do with basic political rights. This made the whole approach to the problem impractical.

The U. S. delegation then persuaded the UN General Assembly to separate the draft covenant into two parts. The first was to cover political rights and freedoms. The second was to cover the economic, social and cultural principles. This was done in 1952.

New U. S. Delegate

When the Commission on Human Rights met in Geneva last April, the then new Republican administration had taken over in Washington. Mrs. Roosevelt was replaced by Mrs. Oswald B. Lord as U. S. delegate. Senator Bricker had introduced his amendment to limit the power of treaties as U. S internal law. And in the highly emotional debate worked up over this issue, the distinction between the two UN covenants was pretty generally lost sight of.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles, testifying before a Senate committee on the Bricker amendment, declared that the U. S. could not accept the draft covenants and would not sign them. That is the official U. S. government position today. Consequently, the debate just started in the Commission on Human Rights at New York may go on for several months. But it may not accomplish anything regardless of whatever eventually happens to the Bricker amendment.

As a substitute for the UN draft covenants on human rights, Secretary Dulles has spelled out an "action program" to promote the development of human rights on a more gradual basis. This was first presented by Mrs. Lord at Geneva last year. It is again before the commission in New York for further consideration this year. It consists of three main proposals:

1. UN members should submit to the commission annual reports on their difficulties in the development of human rights.

2. The commission should initiate studies on specific human rights problems, such as freedom of religion or rights to fair trial.

3. The UN specialized agencies should provide technical assistance and advisory services on human rights to its members, to promote such things as protection of minorities.

Truman Never Has Looked at Eyeful of Communists Squarely

By DAVID LAWRENCE

Washington, March 10—Former President Truman is right when he says "there aren't an eyeful of Communists in the whole country," but he never has looked that eyeful squarely in the face.

For it took only an eyeful of Puerto Rican subversives from the Nationalist party to shoot five members of Congress last week. The whole Nationalist party in Puerto Rico comprises less than 500 persons out of the 2,500,000 population.

It took only an eyeful of Communists this week to sneak in and destroy 18 American planes at an airfield poorly protected by the French in Indo-China.

It took only an eyeful of Communists to steal atomic secrets from the United States and hand them over to Russia. Klaus Fuchs, the spy, was only one man out of the many thousands who worked for the American government at the atomic project, but he did enough damage to the American people to be recorded as the most destructive traitor in history.

It took only an eyeful of Communists in the Department of State, out of many thousands of employes, to attempt to sabotage American policy and one of that eyeful—Alger Hiss—was at Yalta at the elbow of the secretary of state when the United States made its surrender of much of Asia to the Communists.

It took only an eyeful of Communists in the Treasury Department to enable one of their agents—Harry Dexter White—to furnish documents to the Communists and influence governmental monetary policy. Yet Mr. Truman was incredulous and wrote two letters of commendation to that one man even after the FBI revealed the facts to him.

What Mr. Truman and many other loyal Americans misunderstand is the difference between the futile effort of communism to win a substantial number of Americans to its banner and the existence of a conspiracy by a small group to infiltrate our government departments and secure information for Soviet Russia.

The attitude of Mr. Truman ever since 1946 has been one of minimizing the importance of the Communist conspiracy. He wrote throughout his administration letter after letter pooh-poohing the Communist menace, and it was this attitude of disbelief in the Communist capacity to conduct a conspiracy inside the United States that led him to ignore the FBI charges against Harry Dexter White. The same attitude of blind skepticism was exhibited by the late President Roosevelt when Whittaker Chambers confessed to the government that he had been a spy and told that Alger Hiss was guilty of complicity in the espionage which he (Chambers) had been carrying on.

It was this which produced the climate of indifference inside Washington toward the Communists and their agents. It was only when the anti-Communist crusade began in Congress that the Department of Justice, under the last administration, started to do anything toward prosecuting the Communists.

It is not surprising that Mr. Truman should remain unconvinced about the depth of Communist penetration in Washington and its effect on international policy, but it is most surprising that a man as well-informed as Senator Flanders, Republican, of Vermont, should make a speech in the Senate asking what possible connection there is between the anti-Communist crusade in America and the large and dangerous problems in Asia and Europe. The answer is that, because of Communist influence in making policy in the Far East under the last administration, the government of Chiang Kai-Shek was undermined and moral support withdrawn at a critical moment. Thus were 400,000,000 Chinese delivered to bondage under the Communists. The records of the Senate security sub-committee are full of evidence of the manner in which American influence was dissipated in the Far East through Communist infiltration and a policy adopted in Washington which had been consistently advocated by Communist sympathizers in the United States.

If China had not been surrendered to the Communists, there would have been no Korean war and probably the 31,500 American boys killed in that war would be alive today. That's the tragic connection between the indifference of official Washington to the Communist menace inside government, and that's the importance also of alerting the government and the nation to the insidious influences still exerted by only an eyeful of people: They are active even today in trying to persuade the State Department to adopt a policy of appeasement in Indo-China. It is agreed by the administration's own spokesman that the loss of Indo-China to the Communists would be disastrous to the interests of the United States in the future. Hence it is important to keep an eye on the eyeful in the government who are said to constitute what is known as an "appeasement" group favoring the surrender of the Indo-China to Communist control by the same "Coalition" scheme that destroyed the Chiang Kai-Shek government and gave the Communists the upper hand in China.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, March 9 — "Who's Who in America," a monumental mass of petty information and unsubstantiated claims concerning trivial human beings, is about to get out its 26th biennial issue.

Wheeler Sammons, the publisher, is not mentioned in the volume for 1952-53 and I speculate that, either he had a true gentleman's opinion of the pretentiousness of most of the contents or meant us to understand that he looked with knowing disdain on the distinction implied by inclusion in his own work.

Like the social register, this cumulative, arbitrary and fallable roll is no more authentic, except by the personal standards of those who thus presume to confer notability, than a selection of the worst members of Congress by a poll of anonymous Washington correspondents taken by Time, starting inevitably with Joe McCarthy.

It does include that small minority who may be truly important. But there are 48,716 biographies in the new book, an increase of 4,102 in two years notwithstanding the elimination of 5,819 who had made the grade in 1952-53.

That gain does not necessarily indicate that greatness is spreading twice as fast as death and desuetude do in the great. On the contrary, it seems to signify that the standards have been lowered even to the level of the underworld.

Yet, I would be the last to deny that Al Capone and Joe Adonis have been greater Americans in their way that a gentleman selected at random who takes 41 lines to describe himself as a "housing and health administrator" and to list his chairmanships, past and current, of committees including joint committees, too, on public social and mental hygiene and an award for distinguished service to public health. Capone and Adonis have not improved the United States, but Franklin D. Roosevelt certainly was great in any fair meaning of the word and who would say that he left us better off than he found us?

The Editors of "Who's Who in America" acknowledge a resemblance of their process to that of tap day at Yale, a melancholy rite it always seemed to me and degrading on the whole to the student body which hangs around yearning for a scant few invitations to join societies of no known social or intellectual merit.

The rejected majority invite ignominy by their pathetic hopes and here I find "Who's Who in America" boasting in a handout that Andy Frain, of Chicago, who organized the ushers for fights, ballgames and national political conventions, has been "tapped for" the new book under the title of "Crowd Engineer."

Mr. Frain is at least up to the average in importance and personal integrity, but I looked in vain for Ted Williams and remembered that Henry Mencken cavilled at the board for snooting Jack Dempsey the year it admitted Gene Tunney, who had set Dempsey on his heels again and Roy Howard's Christmas party by telling him, "no, no Jack, you were the better man in your prime. Boxing was your metier!"

The mass of great Americans, however, are local judges, Junebug bureaucrats, sculptors, editorial chiefs, clerks, college deans and executives.

Some time ago I had occasion to canvas the book and came upon the biography of Paul Hoffman, the public spendthrift who squandered us enormously into debt in Europe and organized a corps of thousands of misanthropic and generally unemployable white-collar bums, the rakings and scrapings of the Newspaper Guild, the city rooms and the Washington bureaucracy under the generic title of the Marshall Plan.

Hoffman describes himself as a "foundation executive," with reference to the Ford Foundation from which he withdrew, however, in a confined explosion attended by clouds of confusion when he shot off his mouth to the Wall Street Journal about an idea that he had just had to shove a colossal batch of the foundation's Ford stock into the public market which would have given the public and probably the United Auto Workers a foot in the door of the management.

Mr. Hoffman is next or hardly worse than third behind Thomas Watson, the president of International Business Machines, who has 181 lines largely devoted, like Hoffman's, to honorary degrees and medals from foreign governments, although Mr. Watson's career has been incomparably more useful.

Hoffman was the fifth column Democrat who went to the 1952 Republican convention to put over Eisenhower and, having helped to ditch Senator Taft, went back to California where he let go a personal attack on Taft so hateful and abusive that even Harry Truman had nothing to add.

One finds that Hoffman spent less than two years at the University of Chicago but collected 30 Chinese degrees from seats of learning all over the country including some which could have exercised more restraint, dignity and self-respect, such as Notre Dame and Williams.

The implication that "Who's Who" confers recognition and importance is still robust, especially among the young and the obscure.

In one case the editors received a telegram just before they locked the forms to go to press urging them to add to the biographical data on a noted captain of industry the fact that he had just been elected a member of the National Geographic Society.

There is no doubt that vanity of men and women of puny achievement is flattered when they find their little Sunday school citations, Boy Scout medals and the plaques, scrolls and honorary LL.D's, which are the current and growing American counterfeit for public list-

SPACE PROBLEMS

Since the advent of television children have been captivated by the idea of conquering space. Youngsters who once worshipped at the shrine of movie cowboys now focus their attention on "space" adventure programs and there has been a phenomenal sale of toy rocket ships, space helmets and other equipment designed to turn the backyard into a launching platform for a ship to the moon.

All this was very well when it was confined to the imaginings of children. But every day there are news stories which indicate that travel to other planets is not an ideal confined to the youngsters. Reputable scientists, men who hesitate to make startling statements, are taking the idea quite seriously.

Recently we read of the armed forces conducting searches through the skies for tiny earth satellites which might be used as stepping stones to the stars. Such satellites would prove of use as launching platforms for missiles in time of war. In peace time they might hold the key to man's conquest of space.

All this is very disquieting. Just about the time that we have adjusted to the age of the automobile and the airplane, new concepts appear for us to accept. It took us a long time to get used to carrying our sunglasses and to remember to keep our temper in check when parking spaces are not available. How will we ever learn to live with space helmets and rocket ships?

A STRONG JAPAN

There has been a great deal of pressure by certain factions in Japan to secure the withdrawal of American troops. Despite the fact that Japan is in no position to defend itself and cannot hope to be for a long time, some Japanese politicians have made political capital of anti-American sentiment.

Premier Shigeru Yoshida, a wise and able man, has taken a positive stand in favor of the continued presence of American troops in Japan. In a recent speech he made clear his belief that communism in Asia is a menace to a free and independent Japan and that his country cannot hope for any security without a strong alliance with America.

It is a paradox that Japan, once one of the most militaristic states in history, now tends strongly toward pacifism. Many of the Japanese who do not wish the country to rearm or to cooperate with American defense ideas are not in sympathy with communism. They simply do not want their country to fight again, whatever the reason.

These misguided Japanese do not realize the difference between building strength for aggression and building it for defense. A strong Japan is an effective deterrent to any large scale war in Asia—a weak Japan would be an invitation to the Reds to start trouble there.

Premier Yoshida has guided the destiny of Japan for five years. It may be hoped that he will continue in power. His wisdom and foresight have made him one of our most valuable allies.

Tortoise racing has become a favorite sport for tourists to the Virgin Islands. If this seems rather slow, it should be remembered that according to the fables of Aesop, on one occasion a slow-moving tortoise beat a hoppity-jumpity swift running hare.

POSTHUMOUS AMERICAN

Henry Litmanowitz died of wounds he suffered in Korea fighting for the United States. It was his dearest wish that he should become a citizen of the country for which he gave his life. President Eisenhower recently signed a bill granting him posthumous citizenship.

Litmanowitz was only twenty-one years old at the time of his death. He came here from Germany in 1949 and entered the army in 1951. In September of 1952 he was killed.

Growing up in Germany, Litmanowitz knew what tyranny was. He also knew what America was and he loved his adopted land. It is heartwarming to know that at least in death he gained his wish to be listed as a citizen of that land. He paid heavily for the privilege, as millions of Americans before him did.

Our nation will continue to move forward toward greater freedom and dignity for men. Henry Litmanowitz, American, contributed to that future progress.

ROUND AND ROUND IT GOES

I am often told that people are tired of politics, that they are weary of the constant chatter of politicians, that they would prefer to escape from it all. Of course, it is possible to escape from politics by going to one of those Iron Curtain countries where you can get shot for even thinking politically. Hereabouts, politics remains a continuing sport. Every other year somebody comes up for election for Federal office and there are always State and local offices to be filled and the excitement is always high.

Now up in Maine, which is a kind of solemn State, Robert L. Jones is being pitted against Senator Margaret Chase Smith in the Republican Primaries. Whoever wins the Republican Primaries in Maine is likely to be elected, because, generally speaking, the Republicans prevail in that State. Occasionally, they do not and that becomes nationally exciting because the adage that as Maine goes, so the country goes, is still believed.

The reason anybody runs against the learned lady is that Senator Margaret Chase Smith never could quite decide whether she is Republican or Democrat, because she voted her conscience, which can be variable. It is therefore believed that there is a fair chance to beat the lady in the primaries, although not a certain one.

Robert Jones comes of French-Canadian and Yankee stock. If elected, he would probably be the first Senator of French-Canadian ancestry and in Maine, particularly in the northern end, that is politics. At any rate, the potato farmers and the fishermen would take it seriously. He is a graduate of Bates College and has been active in alumni work.

Jones has recently been associated with Senator Charles Potter of Michigan, who is embarrassed by his running against a colleague, so Potter let Jones go, which the latter was going to do anyhow. This may prove to be more embarrassing to Potter than Senator Smith's wrath because Jones is a particular favorite of Senator McCarthy.

In Illinois, where Senator Paul Douglas, the learned economist, runs for re-election as a Democrat, the Republicans think so well of their chances that about seven of them are trying in the primaries. Among them are General Julius Klein, the public relations counsel, who is a friend of General Douglas MacArthur, and Edward A. Hayes, who years ago was National Commander of the American Legion.

Hayes gained fame by actively opposing the recognition of Soviet Russia in 1933 and, as head of the American Legion, going to Franklin D. Roosevelt to lay his opposition on the line. This was a daring thing to do in the atmosphere of the time and gives Hayes a record of anti-Stalinism which many a Johnny-come-lately must envy.

Whether the Republicans will win in Illinois or Paul Douglas will keep his seat is for the voters to decide in far off November, but meanwhile there will be an astonishing amount of politics, vituperation, excitement and anguish. Sensitivity there is not likely to be much of, for that is a new trait in Washington where many grown men dislike being slapped on their bare wrists.

I do not yet know what is to happen in New Hampshire. It has been suggested that the White House Keeper of the Gate, Sherman Adams, expects to run in the Republican Primaries against Senator Styles Bridges. Adams was Governor of New Hampshire before he went to work for the President. He has recently made a speech or two to project his personality before the people and he used the term, "Fear Deal," which I thought was very smart of him, but it did not take.

Most Republicans will be very annoyed with Sherman Adams if he tries to oust Styles Bridges, who is a very big man in the Senate. Adams, rightly or wrongly, is disliked among Republicans because he gets all the blame for everything that goes wrong. If no one else is accounted for, Adams is accused. He is in the awful position once held by Raymond Moley, Rexford Guy Tugwell, Tommy Corcoran and Harry Hopkins. It was probably true about Hopkins. As for Adams, he would do better if he ran, say after 1956, when his virtues can catch up with him and somebody else is the whipping boy.

Well, this is politics and make the most of it.

METRAZOL HELPS ELDERLY PATIENTS

There are three methods of shock treatment, all of which have cleared up mental disturbances in many cases. These methods are insulin, metrazol and electric shock. That the drug, metrazol, is helpful in other physical disturbances in the elderly is stated by Drs. Joseph O. Smigel, Lawrence A. Serhus, and Samuel Barmak in the Journal of the Medical Society of New Jersey.

"The problem of loss of appetite in the aged becomes a serious one, especially in large institutions where menus cannot be individualized. The care of older people is further complicated by states of apathy, apprehension, disorientation, and fatigue so often found in such a group."

Metrazol proved beneficial in improving the appetite, blood picture, and general condition in a group of 20 patients in a chronic disease sanatorium. This drug stimulates breathing and circulation of the blood and thus reduces the "gone" feeling due to lack of oxygen in the blood and increases the general well-being of the patient. Metrazol is stable, non-toxic (not poisonous) and does not accumulate in the system even when given for a considerable length of time. The absorption of metrazol, whether gven by mouth or injection, is good.

"Metrazol is administered in a dose of 0.2 gms. four times a day. If there is no improvement after a month, the dose is increased to 0.3 gms. four times a day. Under such management almost all patients showed improved appetite. Hemoglobin (iron), red, and also white cell count rose. The disorientation (loss of knowledge of his whereabouts) disappears. Patients who had lost control of their bowel and bladder frequently regained this control by use of metrazol. Another favorable response to its use is that the blood pressure falls significantly, especially in those who have high blood pressure."

"Many patients previously bedridden become able to walk about and are able to care for their own needs." This being able to walk about and look after their own needs means much to physicians, nurses and attendants in an institution where the patients are all "chronics," many of them bedridden.

A few years ago it was found that insulin, used to give shock treatment to mental patients, not only increased the appetite of mental patients but also increased the appetite in children and adults who were not mental patients.

It may be that electrical treatment may also help these mental patients by increasing appetite, increasing circulation and lowering the blood pressure as it may the general well-being of nonmental patients.

The same attitude of blind skepticism was exhibited by the late President Roosevelt when Whittaker Chambers confessed to the government that he had been a spy and told that Alger Hiss was guilty of complicity in the espionage which he (Chambers) had been carrying on.

It was this which produced the climate of indifference inside Washington toward the Communists and their agents. It was only when the anti-Communist crusade began in Congress that the Department of Justice, under the last administration, started to do anything toward prosecuting the Communists.

It is not surprising that Mr. Truman should remain unconvinced about the depth of Communist penetration in Washington and its effect on international policy, but it is most surprising that a man as well-informed as Senator Flanders, Republican, of Vermont, should make a speech in the Senate asking what possible connection there is between the anti-Communist crusade in America and the large and dangerous problems in Asia and Europe. The answer is that, because of Communist influence in making policy in the Far East under the last administration, the government of Chiang Kai-Shek was undermined and moral support withdrawn at a critical moment. Thus were 400,000,000 Chinese delivered to bondage under the Communists. The records of the Senate security sub-committee are full of evidence of the manner in which American influence was dissipated in the Far East through Communist infiltration and a policy adopted in Washington which had been consistently advocated by Communist sympathizers in the United States.

If China had not been surrendered to the Communists, there would have been no Korean war and probably the 31,500 American boys killed in that war would be alive today. That's the tragic connection between the indifference of official Washington to the Communist menace inside government, and that's the importance also of alerting the government and the nation to the insidious influences still exerted by only an eyeful of people. They are active even today in trying to persuade the State Department to adopt a policy of appeasement in Indo-China. It is agreed by the administration's own spokesman that the loss of Indo-China to the Communists would be disastrous to the interests of the United States in the future. Hence it is important to keep an eye on the eyeful in the government who are said to constitute what is known as an "appeasement" group favoring the surrender of the Indo-China to Communist control by the same "Coalition" scheme that destroyed the Chiang Kai-Shek government and gave the Communists the upper hand in China.

AS PEGLER SEES IT

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

New York, March 9 — "Who's Who in America," a monumental mass of petty information and unsubstantiated claims concerning trivial human beings, is about to get out its 26th biennial issue.

Wheeler Sammons, the publisher, is not mentioned in the volume for 1952-53 and I speculate that, either he had a true gentleman's opinion of the pretentiousness of most of the contents or meant us to understand that he looked with knowing disdain on the distinction implied by inclusion in his own work.

Like the social register, this cumulative, arbitrary and fallable roll is no more authentic, except by the personal standards of those who thus presume to confer notability, than a selection of the worst members of Congress by a poll of anonymous Washington correspondents taken by Time, starting inevitably with Joe McCarthy.

It does include that small minority who may be truly important. But there are 48,716 biographies in the new book, an increase of 4,102 in two years notwithstanding the elimination of 5,819 who had made the grade in 1952-53.

That gain does not necessarily indicate that greatness is spreading twice as fast as death and desuetude do in the great. On the contrary, it seems to signify that the standards have been lowered even to the level of the underworld.

Yet, I would be the last to deny that Al Capone and Joe Adonis have been greater Americans in their way that a gentleman selected at random who takes 41 lines to describe himself as a "housing and health administrator" and to list his chairmanships, past and current, of committees including joint committees, too, on public social and mental hygiene and an award for distinguished service to public health. Capone and Adonis have not improved the United States, but Franklin D. Roosevelt certainly was great in any fair meaning of the word and who would say that he left us better off than he found us?

The Editors of "Who's Who in America" acknowledge a resemblance of their process to that of tap day at Yale, a melancholy rite it always seemed to me and degrading on the whole to the student body which hangs around yearning for a scant few invitations to join societies of no known social or intellectual merit.

The rejected majority invite ignominy by their pathetic hopes and here I find "Who's Who in America" boasting in a handout that Andy Frain, of Chicago, who organized the ushers for fights, ballgames and national political conventions, has been "tapped for" the new book under the title of "Crowd Engineer."

Mr. Frain is at least up to the average in importance and personal integrity, but I looked in vain for Ted Williams and remembered that Henry Mencken cavilled at the board for snooting Jack Dempsey the year it admitted Gene Tunney, who had set Dempsey on his heels again and Roy Howard's Christmas party by telling him, "no, no Jack, you were the better man in your prime. Boxing was your metier!"

The mass of great Americans, however, are local judges, Junebug bureaucrats, sculptors, editorial chiefs, clerks, college deans and executives.

Some time ago I had occasion to canvas the book and came upon the biography of Paul Hoffman, the public spendthrift who squandered us enormously into debt in Europe and organized a corps of thousands of misanthropic and generally unemployable white-collar bums, the rakings and scrapings of the Newspaper Guild, the city rooms and the Washington bureaucracy under the generic title of the Marshall Plan.

Hoffman describes himself as a "foundation executive," with reference to the Ford Foundation from which he withdrew, however, in a confined explosion attended by clouds of confusion when he shot off his mouth to the Wall Street Journal about an idea that he had just had to shove a colossal batch of the foundation's Ford stock into the public market which would have given the public and probably the United Auto Workers a foot in the door of the management.

Mr. Hoffman is next or hardly worse than third behind Thomas Watson, the president of International Business Machines, who has 181 lines largely devoted, like Hoffman's, to honorary degrees and medals from foreign governments, although Mr. Watson's career has been incomparably more useful.

Hoffman was the fifth column Democrat who went to the 1952 Republican convention to put over Eisenhower and, having helped to ditch Senator Taft, went back to California where he let go a personal attack on Taft so hateful and abusive that even Harry Truman had nothing to add.

One finds that Hoffman spent less than two years at the University of Chicago but collected 30 Chinese degrees from seats of learning all over the country including some which could have exercised more restraint, dignity and self-respect, such as Notre Dame and Williams.

The implication that "Who's Who" confers recognition and importance is still robust, especially among the young and the obscure.

In one case [illegible] editors received a telegram just before they locked the forms to go to press urging them to add to the biographical data on a noted captain of industry the fact that he had just been elected a member of the National Geographic Society.

There is no doubt that vanity of men and women of puny achievement is flattered when they find their little Sunday school citations, Boy Scout medals and the plaques, scrolls and honorary LL.D's, which are the current and growing American counterfeit for public l[illegible] list-

State of Israel Progress, Bonds Will Be Discussed

The progress being made in Israel with the assistance of investment capital from American Jewry will be the theme of the first annual Southern New York State Regional Leadership Conference, in behalf of State of Israel Bonds, which will be held at the Governor Clinton Hotel Sunday afternoon, March 21, it was announced today by Arthur B. Ewig, Joseph Honig and Oscar B. London of Kingston, who are sponsors of the conference.

Business, communal and religious leaders from more than 20 communities in southern New York state will attend the conference to consider the experiences and the problems involved in the sale of State of Israel Bonds since the bond issue was launched in May, 1951. At the same time, they will review the economic progress and the current problems of the State of Israel and make preparations for participating in the inauguration of Israel's second bond issue—the Development Issue, which will be floated soon after May 9, the date of Israel's sixth anniversary.

The Development Bond Issue, which will seek to raise $75,000,000 during 1954, is part of a total issue of $350,000,000 to be floated in the United States, Canada, western Europe and Latin America in the next few years.

Participating in the conference are the following communities: Beacon, Catskill, Ellenville, Haverstraw, Hudson, Hurleyville, Kingston, Liberty, Livingston Manor, Middletown, Monroe, Monticello, Newburgh, Nyack, Poughkeepsie, South Fallsburgh, Spring Valley, Suffern, Walden, Warwick, Woodridge and Wurtsboro.

During the past three years, Israel Bond proceeds have made possible:

Expansion of Israel's present industries and development of new ones, and the increase of electric power.

Creation of an extensive irrigation network, and development of agriculture in the Negev and other parts of the country.

Exploitation of natural resources, including copper, phosphates, potash and other minerals.

Establishment of a system of transportation through the construction of roads, harbors and railways.

Tillson, March 9—Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Webb of Stone Ridge, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Teller of Wallkill and Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Weaver of Tillson visited Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Keator Sunday afternoon.

School Association To Sponsor Frolics

Tillson, March 9—The regular monthly meeting of the Tillson School Association was held at the school house last Thursday evening, with about 20 members present. Mrs. Nathaniel Phillips, vice-president, presided.

A group will attend a special meeting at the Marbletown Central School March 18 to discuss with other interested groups and representatives the problems of education in this area. A report on the meeting will be presented at the April meeting.

A committee of three, Mrs. George Segelken, Mrs. Harry Yarter, and Mrs. Hollis Harvey, reported on their attendance at the town board meeting March 1 in regard to the association's protest of trucks working on the thruway proceeding at dangerous speeds past the school. The members of the board promised that 10-mile per hour limit signs would be posted near the Tillson school and that the area would be properly policed to see that the speed limit was observed by all motorists and trucks.

The problem of young children having BB guns was discussed, and it was thought by some members that children not old enough to have a hunting license should not possess BB guns which, they felt, might injure other children.

The association voted to sponsor the stage show, Frolics of '54, to be followed by a dance. This will take place early in May. The show, similar to the successful Frolics of '52 show, will be an hour and a half variety or vaudeville show, featuring popular entertainers from the Kingston area. More complete details will be available by the next meeting when several committes will be appointed and details discussed.

Following the meeting refreshments were served. Since proper facilities are now available at the school for the preparation of refreshments it was decided to have regfreshments at future meetings.

An electric sheet, donated by the Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corp. was won by Mrs. Peter Hoffman, Jr.

Study the Dummy Then Make Play

BY OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

When the official American Team stopped in New York for a couple of days before going to Europe to play in the World Championship, a practice match was arranged for them at the famous Regency Club in New York.

One nice thing about the practice match was that America was sure to win. In the hand shown today, taken from the match, B. Jay Becker made a very interesting play:

West opened the jack of clubs and Becker studied the dummy intently before making his first play. Suppose you do likewise, and decide on your plan for the hand.

If you decided to win the first trick, give yourself a doubtful mark. Becker played the eight of clubs at the first trick, allowing West to win with the jack.

The true situation didn't occur to West, naturally enough. He assumed a signal with the five of clubs (the four of clubs was missing), and he therefore continued by leading the three of clubs. When dummy's seven of clubs won the second trick, West gulped audibly and visibly.

Becker got to his hand with the ace of hearts to cash the rest of his clubs. It was then easy to duck a heart to East, win the spade return with the ace of spades, and cash the rest of the

If South wins the first club trick and goes after the hearts, East will immediately shift to spades. The defenders can bring in the spades before South can develop nine tricks.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Study the Dummy Then Make Play

BY OSWALD JACOBY
Written for NEA Service

When the official American Team stopped in New York for a couple of days before going to Europe to play in the World Championship, a practice match was arranged for them at the famous Regency Club in New York.

One nice thing about the practice match was that America was sure to win. In the hand shown today, taken from the match, B. Jay Becker made a very interesting play:

West opened the jack of clubs and Becker studied the dummy intently before making his first play. Suppose you do likewise, and decide on your plan for the hand.

If you decided to win the first trick, give yourself a doubtful mark. Becker played the eight of clubs at the first trick, allowing West to win with the jack.

The true situation didn't occur to West, naturally enough. He assumed a signal with the five of clubs (the four of clubs was missing), and he therefore continued by leading the three of clubs. When dummy's seven of clubs won the second trick, West gulped audibly and visibly.

Becker got to his hand with the ace of hearts to cash the rest of his clubs. It was then easy to duck a heart to East, win the spade return with the ace of spades, and cash the rest of the hearts. Thus declarer made four clubs, four hearts and the ace of spades. The defenders could take the rest with the ace of diamonds and the spades, but the contract was home.

If South wins the first club trick and goes after the hearts, East will immediately shift to spades. The defenders can bring in the spades before South can develop nine tricks.

Committee Recommends . . .

the recommendations represented compromises among the committee members, eight legislators (four Republicans and four Democrats) and four non-legislators appointed by Dewey. The non-legislators were Lockwood, Amberg, Brown and Eli Whitney Debevoise.

'Best We Could Get'

Lockwood told newsmen that the report was not as strong as he wanted it, "but it was the best we could get. It was as strong as Mr. Debevoise and I could get and we think it is a progressive report."

The code of ethics contains a long list of do's and don'ts. The heart of the code is the following paragraph:

"No officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe should have any interest, financial or otherwise, direct or indirect, or engage in any business or transaction or professional activity or incur any obligation of any nature which is in substantial conflict with the proper discharge of his duties in the public interest."

The bill spelling out the code states that no officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe "should":

1. Accept any other employment that would impair his independence of judgment with respect to his official duties.

2. Take a job or engage in any business or profession that would require him to disclose confidential state information.

3. Disclose confidential information acquired in the course of official duties or use such information to further his personal interests.

4. Use or try to use his official position to obtain "unwarranted" privileges or exemptions for himself or others.

Other Provisions

The code also provides that no officer or employe of a state agency "should":

Represent the state in any transaction with a company in which he has an interest.

Give grounds for belief that anyone can improperly influence him.

Invest in any enterprise he believes may be involved in decisions to be made by him.

Conduct himself so that he will even be subject to suspicion of violating his public trust.

Sell goods to anyone subject to licensing or regulation by the state agency in which he is employed.

The code requires also that the officer or employe file a report of his financial interest in any company subject to state regulation if the sum is $10,000 or more.

Three committees would be set up to administer the code. One would deal with complaints against senators and would comprise four senators selected by the temporary president of that house.

The second would be an assembly committee of four members appointed by the speaker to handle complaints against members of the assembly.

Both committees would be authorized to investigate complaints of violations of the code and report their findings with recommendations to their respective houses. The houses have the constitutional power to discipline their own members, either by censure or removal.

If criminal prosecution were deemed warranted, the findings would be turned over to the proper law-enforcement officer. In any case where a civil action might be maintained for recovery of money or property received in violation of public trust, the findings would be given to the attorney general.

Advisory Groups

The third committee, to deal with officers and employes of the executive branch of government, would be an advisory group established by the attorney general. At the request of the attorney general the committee would consider violations of the code and make recommendations to him.

Another bill provides that every regulatory agency of the state shall keep a record of appearances before it of attorneys, agents and representatives on behalf of any client and that the record shall be open to public inspection.

The term "regulatory agency" is defined to mean the Banking, Public Service, Insurance, Agriculture, Labor and State Departments and the State Liquor Authority.

Recommendations on restrictions pertaining to doing business with the state provide that:

1. No officer or employes of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe shall represent a client before a state agency where his fee is contingent on the outcome of the case.

No officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe or firm of which such person is a member, or corporation in which the person holds 10 per cent or more of stock, shall sell any goods or services to the state unless pursuant to an award or contract let after public notice or competitive bidding.

No person who has served as an officer or employe of a state agency shall within two years after such service appear before a state agency as a representative of a private client.

No party officer shall serve as a judge of any court of record, attorney general, district attorney or assistant district attorney. As used, the term "party officer" means a member of a national committee, an officer or member of a state committee or a county chairman.

Any violation of the above prohibitions would be a misdemeanor subject to a maximum penalty of $500 fine and a year in jail.

All of the committee's proposed legislation, except a code of fair procedure for legislative probes, previously announced, would take effect next. Jan. 1. The fair procedure code would become effective May 1.

The Amberg-Brown memo said that "public office should not be used for personal gain . . . we have concurred in the recommendations for the code . . . we believe this establishes a norm of conduct. . . .

"The code . . . must over a period of time become so comprehensive as to eliminate any possibility of the use of a public office . . . for private gain. . . . We had hoped to extend the present principles of the law of bribery, which applies equally to the person offering the bribe as to him who accepts. . . . We found it impossible in the time alloted to frame this sound concept into workable legislation.

". . . it would have been much more preferable to have one commission to interpret and govern the administration code. However, to remove serious doubts which several members had as to a conflict with the constitutional provisions vesting sole power to determine the qualifications of its members in each body of the legislature, it was necessary to have three commissions.

"With respect to party officers . . . we believe that any legal restriction on their private business or professional activity would be discriminatory. . . . However, the code . . . should be normally binding on party officers. . . ."

Committee Recommends . . .

the recommendations represented compromises among the committee members, eight legislators (four Republicans and four Democrats) and four non-legislators appointed by Dewey. The non-legislators were Lockwood, Amberg, Brown and Eli Whitney Debevoise.

'Best We Could Get'

Lockwood told newsmen that the report was not as strong as he wanted it, "but it was the best we could get. It was as strong as Mr. Debevoise and I could get and we think it is a progressive report."

The code of ethics contains a long list of do's and don'ts. The heart of the code is the following paragraph:

"No officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe should have any interest, financial or otherwise, direct or indirect, or engage in any business or transaction or professional activity or incur any obligation of any nature which is in substantial conflict with the proper discharge of his duties in the public interest."

The bill spelling out the code states that no officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe "should":

1. Accept any other employment that would impair his independence of judgment with respect to his official duties.

2. Take a job or engage in any business or profession that would require him to disclose confidential state information.

3. Disclose confidential information acquired in the course of official duties or use such information to further his personal interests.

4. Use or try to use his official position to obtain "unwarranted" privileges or exemptions for himself or others.

Other Provisions

The code also provides that no officer or employe of a state agency "should":

Represent the state in any transaction with a company in which he has an interest.

Give grounds for belief that anyone can improperly influence him.

Invest in any enterprise he believes may be involved in decisions to be made by him.

Conduct himself so that he will even be subject to suspicion of violating his public trust.

Sell goods to anyone subject to licensing or regulation by the state agency in which he is employed.

The code requires also that the officer or employe file a report of his financial interest in any company subject to state regulation if the sum is $10,000 or more.

Three committees would be set up to administer the code. One would deal with complaints against senators and would comprise four senators selected by the temporary president of that house.

The second would be an assembly committee of four members appointed by the speaker to handle complaints against members of the assembly.

Both committees would be authorized to investigate complaints of violations of the code and report their findings with recommendations to their respective houses. The houses have the constitutional power to discipline their own members, either by censure or removal.

If criminal prosecution were deemed warranted, the findings would be turned over to the proper law-enforcement officer. In any case where a civil action might be maintained for recovery of money or property received in violation of public trust, the findings would be given to the attorney general.

Advisory Groups

The third committee, to deal with officers and employes of the executive branch of government, would be an advisory group established by the attorney general. At the request of the attorney general the committee would consider violations of the code and make recommendations to him.

Another bill provides that every regulatory agency of the state shall keep a record of appearances before it of attorneys, agents and representatives on behalf of any client and that the record shall be open to public inspection.

The term "regulatory agency" is defined to mean the Banking, Public Service, Insurance, Agriculture, Labor and State Departments and the State Liquor Authority.

Recommendations on restrictions pertaining to doing business with the state provide that:

1. No officer or employes of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe shall represent a client before a state agency where his fee is contingent on the outcome of the case.

No officer or employe of a state agency, member of the Legislature or legislative employe or firm of which such person is a member, or corporation in which the person holds 10 per cent or more of stock, shall sell any goods or services to the state unless pursuant to an award or contract let after public notice or competitive bidding.

No person who has served as an officer or employe of a state agency shall within two years after such service appear before a state agency as a representative of a private client.

No party officer shall serve as a judge of any court of record, attorney general, district attorney or assistant district attorney. As used, the term "party officer" means a member of a national committee, an officer or member of a state committee or a county chairman.

Any violation of the above prohibitions would be a misdemeanor subject to a maximum penalty of $500 fine and a year in jail.

All of the committee's proposed legislation, except a code of fair procedure for legislative probes, previously announced, would take effect next. Jan. 1. The fair procedure code would become effective May 1.

The Amberg-Brown memo said that "public office should not be used for personal gain . . . we have concurred in the recommendations for the code . . . we believe this establishes a norm of conduct. . . .

"The code . . . must over a period of time become so comprehensive as to eliminate any possibility of the use of a public office . . . for private gain. . . . We had hoped to extend the present principles of the law of bribery, which applies equally to the person offering the bribe as to him who accepts. . . . We found it impossible in the time alloted to frame this sound concept into workable legislation.

". . . it would have been much more preferable to have one commission to interpret and govern the administration code. However, to remove serious doubts which several members had as to a conflict with the constitutional provisions vesting sole power to determine the qualifications of its members in each body of the legislature, it was necessary to have three commissions.

"With respect to party officers . . . we believe that any legal restriction on their private business or professional activity would be discriminatory. . . . However, the code . . . should be normally binding on party officers. . . ."

tower reached half way across the Tillson road.

It was explained that when the tower began to tilt the engineer didn't have time to "drop his load" and stop it from going over.

The crew was driving steel pipe and "shell" for one side of the overpass at the time of the accident.

A spokesman for the telephone company said the telephones affected were those in the Rosendale exchange, principally located in the Rifton section. They will be repaired sometime this afternoon, he said.

Big Industry

The Christmas tree industry of the United States is a mighty one. About 21,000,000 trees are produced each year; 87 per cent are produced on private forest land; about a million are harvested on the national forests. About 100,000 acres of woodland are devoted solely to growth of Christmas trees.

General Motors Did 10 Billions in '53

New York, March 10 (AP)—Ten billion dollars in sales, more than 1¾ billions in taxes, 598 millions in profits—that's the record of General Motors Corp. for 1953.

The sales of $10,027,985,482 were the highest in history for any private corporation and eclipsed by a wide margin the $7,549,154,419 in 1952, previous record for GM or any other firm.

Net income of $598,119,478 was only the third highest for the giant auto manufacturer but kept its position as biggest moneymaker in American industry, topping 1953 earnings of 553 million by Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) and 491 million for the Bell Telephone system.

Direct taxes of $1,237,000,000 plus $661,000,000 collected by GM in sales and excise taxes came to $1,898,000,000, equivalent to $21.77 a share of common stock, compared with net income of $6.71 a share.

Adversely Affected

"Earnings continued to be adversely affected by excess profits taxes and in 1953 earnings also were affected by higher material costs, particularly higher premium steel costs, higher labor costs including large amounts for overtime premiums, and increased costs for special tools," said the annual report.

The report to GM's 495,000 stockholders, by Harlow H. Curtice, president, and Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the board, reported the company sold 3,760,000 passenger cars and trucks in 1953 against 2,629,000 in 1952. Of the 1953 total, 3,726,000 were produced in the company's United States plants and 484,000 in Canadian and overseas plants. Of 1953 U. S. and Canadian factory sales for passenger cars, GM had 45.7 per cent.

Six Per Cent of Sales

The net income of $6.71 a share, after the annual requirement of $12,928,312 in preferred dividends, amounted to six per cent on net sales. This compared with 7.4 per cent on sales in 1952 when net income was $558,721,179 or $6.25 a share. The only years when net income exceeded that for 1953 was 1949 when it was $656,434,232 and 1950 when it was $834,044,039, which still stands as an all-time record for any private enterprise.

The company reported sales of home appliances and other products of its Frigidaire division were best for any year except 1950. Its total civilian sales of more than eight billion dollars topped any previous year's total for combined military and civilian sales. Defense sales alone came to $1,938,000,000, up from the previous year's $1,452,000,000.

Assets at the end of the year were $4,405,475,042 compared with $4,001,294,708 at the end of 1952.

Three Actions Are Continued Here

Continued today in Supreme Court before Justice Bookstein were three negligence actions arising out of an accident at West Park on Labor Day, 1950, when a car driven by Joseph Avis, Kingston attorney, proceeding north struck a car of Adeline and Joseph Bua which was returning to New York. The Bua car, after a blowout, swung around and stopped in the northbound lane. Avis coming north struck the car and fatal injuries were inflicted on his father-in-law, Max Leventhal, of Bronx, who was a passenger in the Avis car.

Others injured were Mr. Avis and Mrs. Bua. Avis sues the Buas and Bua also sues Mr. Avis while an action is also brought by Mrs. Leventhal against both Avis and Bua to recover for the death of her husband.

Tuesday testimony was concluded early in the afternoon because of the absence of a medical witness who was in New York. The case was resumed this morning at the opening of court.

Avis is represented by Cashin & Ewig. Santagata and Santagata of New York appear for Mr. and Mrs. Bua and Robert J. Keegan, Jr., appears for Mrs. Leventhal.

Dulles Says Latins

delegation itself as to how Washington's economic views should be presented. The Latin Americans want an increase in U. S. commercial and technical aid.

Dulles speech today came after various Latin American nations had said a clear explanation of Washington's economic policy was needed before they could make their own plans.

No Broad Departure

The southern neighbors of the United States were disappointed if they had expected any broad departure from Dulles original outline last week, emphasizing the importance of private enterprise in the U. S. view.

"Many of you feel some adjustments of U. S. economic policies would be mutually beneficial," Dulles said. "You may be right. Certainly these are matters which we are prepared to consider openmindedly."

He said an important economic-financial delegation representing the U. S. State and Treasury Departments and the export-import bank was on hand in Caracas to "discuss, to study and to learn in line with the traditional United States policy of constantly taking new ways whenever we can be confident that the change is for the better."

Dulles said that government plays a big role in the conomic affairs of many American Republics.

"Some of you," he added, "May think in terms of governmental capabilities where we think in terms of private activity."

Ellen Reina Missing

Local police were notified through the sheriff's office at 7:55 p. m., yesterday that Ellen Reina, 19, of New Paltz, has been missing from home since Monday morning. Undersheriff Clayton Vredenburgh said at 1:30 p. m., today that no word had been received indicating that she had been located.

Richter Obliges, Loses Clothes, Eggs

At least one local resident has a right to be suspicious of anyone out to take a shortcut.

Officers Thomas McGrane and Meyer Levy, who investigated a report at 5:45 p. m., yesterday, said William Richter of Chapel street extension, told them that two men who had asked to take a shortcut across his property, were given that permission.

Then Richter noted that two suits of underwear, an overcoat, and three shirts had been taken from a clothes line, and a dozen eggs were missing.

Richter, police said, reported finding some of the clothes, which the men had been wearing, discarded along the railroad tracks near Albert street.

Car Sales Mount

Detroit, March 10 (AP)—New car sales are moving upward, Ward's reports said today. The statistical agency said February sales reached 401,500 units, 13 per cent above January volume. The March volume, it added, should parallel that of last March when dealers delivered 520,575 new cars. Ward's said, however, that dealer stocks on Feb. 28 continued to rise, moving up about three per cent over the Jan. 31 high record of more than 600,000 units. Used car stocks were reported to have declined slightly from the Jan. 31 level.

Bids to Be Opened For Paltz Roads

Bids are scheduled to be opened in Albany April 1 at 10:30 a. m., for road construction in the New Paltz area and furnishing and erecting interchange traffic signs along the New York State Thruway.

The road work is to be done on the New Paltz-Plattekill State Highway No. 572, and New Paltz-Rifton State Highway No. 308 for a total estimated mileage of 1.49 at a total estimated cost of $118,000.

Traffic signs for the interchanges are to be placed along the Catskill, Mohawk, Ontario and Hudson sections. The estimated cost is $119,000.

Maps, plans, specifications and proposal forms may be obtained by bidders at the state public works department's Bureau of Contracts and Accounts, Albany, or at the New York city office at 270 Broadway.

Newburgh Source Denies Purchase

A rumor that the A. H. Gildersleeve and Son, Inc., property at 615 Broadway had been sold to a Newburgh department store is without apparent foundation, a check by The Freeman this morning disclosed.

The rumor had it that Schoonmaker's Department Store, Newburgh, was negotiating for its purchase.

A call to Schoonmaker's disclosed that Schonmaker was in Florida. A. D. Romano, treasurer of the store, said there was "no basis to such a rumor." He explained that "people come in and we talk to them but I don't think we have any interest in this particular matter."

Attorney Thomas Saccoman, who represents the Gildersleeve interests, said he had no knowledge of any negotiation although there is a plot of land on Broadway with a 100-foot frontage which would be ideal for location of a department store.

Thruway Bill Passes

Albany, N. Y., March 10 (AP)—Over vigorous Democratic objections, the Republican-dominated Senate today approved legislation to finance the remainder of the state thruway as a cost estimated unofficially at 350 million dollars. The vote was 37 to 18, Democrats contended the bill, which permits the Thruway Authority to issue notes and bonds without any specified limit constituted a blank check.

Wildcat Strike Continues

New York, March 10 (AP)—Dock workers continued their wildcat strike along Manhattan's vast waterfront today in defiance of court and union orders. Work on Brooklyn's many piers was reported normal, however. It was the sixth day in which stubborn longshoremen refused to do their jobs on the Manhattan waterfront. The refusal has halted the loading and unloading of freighters, and slowed passenger ship schedules.

Curran Says He

name of his wife for 18 months, up to Oct. 19, 1953.

Today he testified that neither he nor his wife ever owned the stock, and that neither had any beneficial interest in it.

"The stock was bought and is still owned by a friend of mine, Joseph H. Mentz, who offered it to me in March, 1952, and who, thinking I might buy it for my wife, registered it in her name," said Curran.

His earlier testimony led to speculation that Curran might be asked to resign by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. So far, the governor has declined to comment on the matter.

Curran's initial testimony was that he had introduced former Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas Todarelli, then representing Algam, to former Supreme Court Judge William F. Bleakley, attorney for an estate which owned the old Empire City race track property. This property eventually became Yonkers Raceway, a fabulously successful enterprise.

Was Promised Percentage

Curran said Todarelli promised him a percentage of his own fee if anything developed in the talks with Bleakley.

"Strange to say," continued Curran, "a year or more after the last talk I received a $10,000 check from Mr. Todarelli."

Curran arrived at the Moreland Commission's hearing room today about 40 minutes before the hearing began, and asked Chairman Bruce Bromley if he could read a prepared statement under oath when the session began.

The request was granted. Curran was sworn in, took the witness stand and read his statement, which said in part:

"My law firm, Curran and Stim, were retained as co-counsel by Thomas J. Todarelli in connection with the acquisition of the Yonkers real estate which is now the Yonkers Raceway.

"I was brought into the matter for no political reason whatever. I was brought in because it was felt that there might be keen competition from other prospective purchasers, and since I knew Judge Bleakley well, and also to some extent the Butler interests (which owned the property), it was felt I could be helpful in the negotiations."

Two Men Hurt

tower reached half way across the Tillson road.

It was explained that when the tower began to tilt the engineer didn't have time to "drop his load" and stop it from going over.

The crew was driving steel pipe and "shell" for one side of the overpass at the time of the accident.

A spokesman for the telephone company said the telephones affected were those in the Rosendale exchange, principally located in the Rifton section. They will be repaired sometime this afternoon, he said.

Big Industry

The Christmas tree industry of the United States is a mighty one. About 21,000,000 trees are produced each year; 87 per cent are produced on private forest land; about a million are harvested on the national forests. About 100,000 acres of woodland are devoted solely to growth of Christmas trees.

General Motors Did 10 Billions in '53

New York, March 10 (AP)—Ten billion dollars in sales, more than 1¾ billions in taxes, 598 millions in profits—that's the record of General Motors Corp. for 1953.

The sales of $10,027,985,482 were the highest in history for any private corporation and eclipsed by a wide margin the $7,549,154,419 in 1952, previous record for GM or any other firm.

Net income of $598,119,478 was only the third highest for the giant auto manufacturer but kept its position as biggest moneymaker in American industry, topping 1953 earnings of 553 million by Standard Oil Co. (N. J.) and 491 million for the Bell Telephone system.

Direct taxes of $1,237,000,000 plus $661,000,000 collected by GM in sales and excise taxes came to $1,898,000,000, equivalent to $21.77 a share of common stock, compared with net income of $6.71 a share.

Adversely Affected

"Earnings continued to be adversely affected by excess profits taxes and in 1953 earnings also were affected by higher material costs, particularly higher premium steel costs, higher labor costs including large amounts for overtime premiums, and increased costs for special tools," said the annual report.

The report to GM's 495,000 stockholders, by Harlow H. Curtice, president, and Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., chairman of the board, reported the company sold 3,760,000 passenger cars and trucks in 1953 against 2,629,000 in 1952. Of the 1953 total, 3,726,000 were produced in the company's United States plants and 484,000 in Canadian and overseas plants. Of 1953 U. S. and Canadian factory sales for passenger cars, GM had 45.7 per cent.

Six Per Cent of Sales

The net income of $6.71 a share, after the annual requirement of $12,928,312 in preferred dividends, amounted to six per cent on net sales. This compared with 7.4 per cent on sales in 1952 when net income was $558,721,179 or $6.25 a share. The only years when net income exceeded that for 1953 was 1949 when it was $656,434,232 and 1950 when it was $834,044,039, which still stands as an all-time record for any private enterprise.

The company reported sales of home appliances and other products of its Frigidaire division were best for any year except 1950. Its total civilian sales of more than eight billion dollars topped any previous year's total for combined military and civilian sales. Defense sales alone came to $1,938,000,000, up from the previous year's $1,452,000,000.

Assets at the end of the year were $4,405,475,042 compared with $4,001,294,708 at the end of 1952.

Three Actions Are Continued Here

Continued today in Supreme Court before Justice Bookstein were three negligence actions arising out of an accident at West Park on Labor Day, 1950, when a car driven by Joseph Avis, Kingston attorney, proceeding north struck a car of Adeline and Joseph Bua which was returning to New York. The Bua car, after a blowout, swung around and stopped in the northbound lane. Avis coming north struck the car and fatal injuries were inflicted on his father-in-law, Max Leventhal, of Bronx, who was a passenger in the Avis car.

Others injured were Mr. Avis and Mrs. Bua. Avis sues the Buas and Bua also sues Mr. Avis while an action is also brought by Mrs. Leventhal against both Avis and Bua to recover for the death of her husband.

Tuesday testimony was concluded early in the afternoon because of the absence of a medical witness who was in New York. The case was resumed this morning at the opening of court.

Avis is represented by Cashin & Ewig. Santagata and Santagata of New York appear for Mr. and Mrs. Bua and Robert J. Keegan, Jr., appears for Mrs. Leventhal.

Dulles Says Latins

delegation itself as to how Washington's economic views should be presented. The Latin Americans want an increase in U. S. commercial and technical aid.

Dulles speech today came after various Latin American nations had said a clear explanation of Washington's economic policy was needed before they could make their own plans.

No Broad Departure

The southern neighbors of the United States were disappointed if they had expected any broad departure from Dulles original outline last week, emphasizing the importance of private enterprise in the U. S. view.

"Many of you feel some adjustments of U. S. economic policies would be mutually beneficial," Dulles said. "You may be right. Certainly these are matters which we are prepared to consider open-mindedly."

He said an important economic-financial delegation representing the U. S. State and Treasury Departments and the export-import bank was on hand in Caracas to "discuss, to study and to learn in line with the traditional United States policy of constantly taking new ways whenever we can be confident that the change is for the better."

Dulles said that government plays a big role in the conomic affairs of many American Republics.

"Some of you," he added, "May think in terms of governmental capabilities where we think in terms of private activity."

Ellen Reina Missing

Local police were notified through the sheriff's office at 7:55 p. m., yesterday that Ellen Reina, 19, of New Paltz, has been missing from home since Monday morning. She was described as about five feet, three inches tall, weighing about 120 with blonde hair and blue eyes. She wore a brown fur coat, blue hat, and black shoes, the report said. Undersheriff Clayton Vredenburgh said at 1:30 p. m., today that no word had been received indicating that she had been located.

Richter Obliges, Loses Clothes, Eggs

At least one local resident has a right to be suspicious of anyone out to take a shortcut.

Officers Thomas McGrane and Meyer Levy, who investigated a report at 5:45 p. m., yesterday, said William Richter of Chapel street extension, told them that two men who had asked to take a shortcut across his property, were given that permission.

Then Richter noted that two suits of underwear, an overcoat, and three shirts had been taken from a clothes line, and a dozen eggs were missing.

Richter, police said, reported finding some of the clothes, which the men had been wearing, discarded along the railroad tracks near Albert street.

Car Sales Mount

Detroit, March 10 (AP)—New car sales are moving upward, Ward's reports said today. The statistical agency said February sales reached 401,500 units, 13 per cent above January volume. The March volume, it added, should parallel that of last March when dealers delivered 520,575 new cars. Ward's said, however, that dealer stocks on Feb. 28 continued to rise, moving up about three per cent over the Jan. 31 high record of more than 600,000 units. Used car stocks were reported to have declined slightly from the Jan. 31 level.

Bids to Be Opened For Paltz Roads

Bids are scheduled to be opened in Albany April 1 at 10:30 a. m., for road construction in the New Paltz area and furnishing and erecting interchange traffic signs along the New York State Thruway.

The road work is to be done on the New Paltz-Plattekill State Highway No. 572, and New Paltz-Rifton State Highway No. 308 for a total estimated mileage of 1.49 at a total estimated cost of $118,000.

Traffic signs for the interchanges are to be placed along the Catskill, Mohawk, Ontario and Hudson sections. The estimated cost is $119,000.

Maps, plans, specifications and proposal forms may be obtained by bidders at the state public works department's Bureau of Contracts and Accounts, Albany, or at the New York city office at 270 Broadway.

Newburgh Source Denies Purchase

A rumor that the A. H. Gildersleeve and Son, Inc., property at 615 Broadway had been sold to a Newburgh department store is without apparent foundation, a check by The Freeman this morning disclosed.

The rumor had it that Schoonmaker's Department Store, Newburgh, was negotiating for its purchase.

A call to Schoonmaker's disclosed that Schonmaker was in Florida. A. D. Romano, treasurer of the store, said there was "no basis to such a rumor." He explained that "people come in and we talk to them but I don't think we have any interest in this particular matter."

Attorney Thomas Saccoman, who represents the Gildersleeve interests, said he had no knowledge of any negotiation although there is a plot of land on Broadway with a 100-foot frontage which would be ideal for location of a department store.

Thruway Bill Passes

Albany, N. Y., March 10 (AP)—Over vigorous Democratic objections, the Republican-dominated Senate today approved legislation to finance the remainder of the state thruway as a cost estimated unofficially at 350 million dollars. The vote was 37 to 18. Democrats contended the bill, which permits the Thruway Authority to issue notes and bonds without any specified limit constituted a blank check.

Wildcat Strike Continues

New York, March 10 (AP)—Dock workers continued their wildcat strike along Manhattan's vast waterfront today in defiance of court and union orders. Work on Brooklyn's many piers was reported normal, however. It was the sixth day in which stubborn longshoremen refused to do their jobs on the Manhattan waterfront. The refusal has halted the loading and unloading of freighters, and slowed passenger ship schedules.

Curran Says He

name of his wife for 18 months, up to Oct. 19, 1953.

Today he testified that neither he nor his wife ever owned the stock, and that neither had any beneficial interest in it.

"The stock was bought and is still owned by a friend of mine, Joseph H. Mentz, who offered it to me in March, 1952, and who, thinking I might buy it for my wife, registered it in her name," said Curran.

His earlier testimony led to speculation that Curran might be asked to resign by Gov. Thomas E. Dewey. So far, the governor has declined to comment on the matter.

Curran's initial testimony was that he had introduced former Assistant U. S. Attorney Thomas Todarelli, then representing Algam, to former Supreme Court Judge William F. Bleakley, attorney for an estate which owned the old Empire City race track property. This property eventually became Yonkers Raceway, a fabulously successful enterprise.

Was Promised Percentage

Curran said Todarelli promised him a percentage of his own fee if anything developed in the talks with Bleakley.

"Strange to say," continued Curran, "a year or more after the last talk I received a $10,000 check from Mr. Todarelli."

Curran arrived at the Moreland Commission's hearing room today about 40 minutes before the hearing began, and asked Chairman Bruce Bromley if he could read a prepared statement under oath when the session began.

Area Roads Are 'Merry Web' With Wealth of Good Views

BY CHARLES R. DOUGLAS

Ulster county has a wealth of roads leading homeward along with those reaching out into the world and among them is a network in the Rondout valley which has helped pattern our farm and home life.

They are a merry web in the Catskill and Shawangunk mountain country; up, down and around in awry, roller-coaster pattern, but they have much more to offer in memorable scene than the major routes of the region.

Concentrated almost in the center of the county they fan out from farm-to-market arteries in parts of the townships of Rochester, Marbletown, Hurley, Olive and Rosendale, but are more intricate in the region between Route 209 and the Ashokan reservoir area.

Away From World

They are generally away from the manicured and push-button world and many of us who have explored them feel that they sum up in full meaning a picture of American rural life.

Many of the farm clusters: homes, barns and other buildings, are as picturesque as any in the land, and most of them are like natural outcroppings of the rolling landscape around them; usually a house of gray or grayish-brown limestone, flanked, or sometimes almost surrounded by barns and other structures in weatherbeaten hues of umber, sienna, grays and occasionally lively reds or greens.

In this back country you may see the land in the refulgent glow of autumn when the pumpkins are piled high in the barnyards; corn stacks assembled in the pattern of an Indian village, men stacking long rows of winter wood and women adding visual warmth to cellar shelves with colorful jars of preserves.

Or in Early Spring

You might find it interesting to arrive at hog-killing time, or when the ice is harvested. You may again go to see the maples in their soft, sweet prelude to spring, and watch them yield dawdling drips of sap into rows of shiny buckets, and you may enjoy the new life which comes with the exhilarating fragrance of April, or the verdant brightness of June.

Again you may see summer bless the land with full harvest and most any time you may catch the flurry and prattle of barnyard fowl, and remember it as the symphony of the region. You may read the meaning of peace—the soft vibration of contentment—in the ripples of a placid pond behind a cruising duck.

Then there is the lulling music in the many purling streams, some of which send limpid waters to caress lichened wheels of deserted mill structures, or violent cascades to the cool floors of deep ravines.

Clusters and Patterns

The panoramic roll of the undulating valley country as viewed from the many high places, is one picture to bring you back. From these high roads the farm tracts sprawl out like a crazy quilt spread over the valley with fingers of woodlands in desultory defiance of the piebald pattern, reaching to the Catskills on one side and the Shawangunks on the other.

You may see a farm cluster high up against the blue breath of a deep valley with a mountain backdrop, or another napping undisturbed in valley shadows.

Along many of these roads are old stone farm homes with thick walls and high peaked roofs from which dormer windows peep. Generally they are not as old as the colonial houses of Hurley, Stone Ridge, Kingston and New Paltz, but time has set them well in the land. Some, of bluestone were built within the past century, and many have been renovated and equipped with modern conveniences.

You may reach this area on the one side by leaving Route 209 at Hurley, Stone Ridge, Accord or Kerhonkson, driving northward toward the Catskills, or from the Ashokan reservoir area by turning southward from the Olive Bridge and West Shokan areas.

The road to Lomontville from Hurley leads into the network and several of the roads join with Route 213 between Stone Ridge and Olive Bridge. Others lead off the route between Kerhonkson and Samsonville and from the Kripplebush, Lyonsville, Krumville road.

Network Is Smaller

Other roads on the south side of Route 209 in the High Falls, Alligerville, Kyserike areas fan out along the base of the Shawangunks. The network here is smaller, but none the less interesting, and near a few of the roads is the bed of the old Delaware and Hudson canal.

The county has many other roads and trails which lead to mountainous or wooded isolation, but they are more scattered and rambling than the Rondout Valley web. We hope to report on the others, such as the Slide Mountain and Sundown routes in the near future.

It is fun, we think, to ride a back road without prior knowledge of where it ends. In the town of Rochester, one could get going in circles for awhile, but if he remembers that the Shawangunks are to the south and the Catskills to the north, he'll probably not remain lost for long. If you are the type who likes traveling by map, that too, can be fun.

Whichever way you go, you may learn it is possible to look just beyond horizons for explatory ventures before taking off for the Moon, and we know you'll return home grateful for the fact that it's all less than a tank of gasoline from you.

Two out of every 10 dwellings in Paris, France, are more than 80 years old.

Cattle Country

The eastern end of Long Island, near Montauk Point, once was important cattle country, the National Geographic Society says. As early as 1660 "cow-keepers" tended herds of grazing animals. From two to six thousand head ranged there until the end of the 1800's. Cattle drives with galloping cowboys and noisy herds annually drew the attention of the entire countryside.

A Peppercorn a Year

A rental fee of one peppercorn a year is paid by a fraternal organization for use of the old State House at St. George, Bermuda. The island's governor receives the token payment at a formal ceremony every spring, says the National Geographic Society. To date 138 pepper seeds have changed hands.

Topic Announced For Bureau Session

Father and son business agreements will be the topic for a meeting Tuesday evening, March 16, at the Ulster County Farm Bureau office, 74 John street.

William H. Palmer, county agricultural agent, urges all farmers having sons working in partnership with them to attend the meeting, which will be conducted by Professor Robert Smith, coordinator of Young Adult Program, Cornell University.

In addition to business agreements, discussions will be held on drawing up wills and inheritance and income tax information for farm families where a father is interested in turning ownership of the farm over to a son.

This is the first meeting of its type to be held in Ulster county. It begins at 8 p. m.

Prof. Smith will be available for making personal visits Tuesday and Wednesday, March 16 and 17, to farm families interested in father-son agreements. Requests for personal visits may be directed to the Farm Bureau office.

Area Roads Are 'Merry Web' With Wealth of Good Views

BY CHARLES R. DOUGLAS

Ulster county has a wealth of roads leading homeward along with those reaching out into the world and among them is a network in the Rondout valley which has helped pattern our farm and home life.

They are a merry web in the Catskill and Shawangunk mountain country; up, down and around in awry, roller-coaster pattern, but they have much more to offer in memorable scene than the major routes of the region.

Concentrated almost in the center of the county they fan out from farm-to-market arteries in parts of the townships of Rochester, Marbletown, Hurley, Olive and Rosendale, but are more intricate in the region between Route 209 and the Ashokan reservoir area.

Away From World

They are generally away from the manicured and push-button world and many of us who have explored them feel that they sum up in full meaning a picture of American rural life.

Many of the farm clusters: homes, barns and other buildings, are as picturesque as any in the land, and most of them are like natural outcroppings of the rolling landscape around them; usually a house of gray or grayish-brown limestone, flanked, or sometimes almost surrounded by barns and other structures in weatherbeaten hues of umber, sienna, grays and occasionally lively reds or greens.

In this back country you may see the land in the refulgent glow of autumn when the pumpkins are piled high in the barnyards; corn stacks assembled in the pattern of an Indian village, men stacking long rows of winter wood and women adding visual warmth to cellar shelves with colorful jars of preserves.

Or in Early Spring

You might find it interesting to arrive at hog-killing time, or when the ice is harvested. You may again go to see the maples in their soft, sweet prelude to spring, and watch them yield dawdling drips of sap into rows of shiny buckets, and you may enjoy the new life which comes with the exhilarating fragrance of April, or the verdant brightness of June.

Again you may see summer bless the land with full harvest and most any time you may catch the flurry and prattle of barnyard fowl, and remember it as the symphony of the region. You may read the meaning of peace—the soft vibration of contentment—in the ripples of a placid pond behind a cruising duck.

Then there is the lulling music in the many purling streams, some of which send limpid waters to caress lichened wheels of deserted mill structures, or violent cascades to the cool floors of deep ravines.

Clusters and Patterns

The panoramic roll of the undulating valley country as viewed from the many high places, is one picture to bring you back. From these high roads the farm tracts sprawl out like a crazy quilt spread over the valley with fingers of woodlands in desultory defiance of the piebald pattern, reaching to the Catskills on one side and the Shawangunks on the other.

Many Islands

Washington — Japan's Inland Sea is 250 miles long, stretching from Osaka at the eastern end to Moji at the western. No other sea on earth—not even Greece's Aegean—embraces so many islands, says the National Geographic Society. They number from 700 to 3,000, depending upon whether the term "island" is extended to cover islets and the fantastic rocks that jut up as much as a hundred feet above the water.

The surface of Lake Michigan is more than 21 feet below that of Lake Superior.

ADVERTISE IN THE FREEMAN

PITCHING HORSESHOES

By BILLY ROSE

THE TALE OF TWO STRATFORDS

Every now and so often, I get a letter from the mayor of this or that smallish town asking me to suggest a stunt or scheme which will help put his community on the map.

My answer to all such queries is that I know of only one sure-fire way to publicize a small town. Namely, to capitalize on the pulling power of a gent named William Shakespeare.

The alderman in the checked vest has a question? How can a longhair like Shakespeare attract attention and tourists to, let's say, Pismo Beach, Calif., or Ong's Hat, N. J.?

Well, the simplest way to answer the alderman is to give him some facts and figures about the Shakespeare industry.

For centuries, Stratford upon Avon was an English whistle stop, listed in the travel agencies only because it was the birthplace of the Bumptious Bard. In this town, mostly for reasons of nostalgia, a replica of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre was kept open, but it only gave 80 performances a season and played to an average attendance of fewer than 500 customers.

Some years ago this miniature theatre burned down, and several of the town's live wires decided to replace it with a large modern auditorium in which two permanent repertory companies, with big names as guest stars, would give performance eight months out of the year.

Result? As of today, the new Stratford-upon-Avon theatre is playing to almost 500,000 paid admissions a year, and the culture-hungry tourists who flock to it from all over the world have made Stratford the most prosperous small town in England. Virtually every ticket sold means the purchase of a night's lodging in a local hostelry, fish and chips in a restaurant, a couple of drinks in a pub, and a rowboat on the Avon. And as for getting on the map, Stratford is better known around the world than many cities with a hundred times its population.

Another example of what the Wondrous William can do for a community is the village in Ontario which is also known as Stratford. Just last summer, in an arena-type tent, a couple of civic-minded gents presented "All's Well That Ends Well" and "Richard III" with Alec Guinness as the male star and his London colleague, Tyrone Guthrie, as director.

Result? For one thing, there wasn't a hotel or rooming house accommodation to be had within a radius of 20 miles. For another the event was considered so important that it was covered by just about every topflight dramatic critic in the Western Hemisphere. Did the canvas-top theatre do any business? Yes, almost $50,000 a week during its engagement.

To be sure, this kind of box-office magic only happens when top players, directors and technicians are hired to do the right and proper by Will's words. But the remarkable thing about Shakespeare is that when you set out to present him beautifully, you can buy some of the theatre's biggest talents for small dough. This season, Robert Ryan came 3,000 miles from Hollywood to act in "Coriolanus" at a slow hundred bucks a week. Earlier, Jose Ferrer starred in "Richard III," and his proudest brag was that the management paid for his lunch. The thespian, it seems, has only one dream—to be able to say "The time I did Hamlet—" or "When I played Lady Macbeth—"

This year, as per usual, dozens of towns will spend huge amounts of money on razzmatazz promotion stunts. They will try to make a big noise with pageants, festivals, name bands and the crowning of Miss Broccoli of 1954. And in almost every case, they will engage the services of high-priced public relations counselors.

For a fraction of what they squander, as the story of the two Stratfords proves, they can have the services of the greatest press agent of them all—Mr. Shakespeare—who works for free and doesn't even ask for a cut of the take.

Autographed Cello at Museum

Famed signatures may be viewed. (Wagenfohr photo)

Cello Displayed At Local Museum

Englebert Roentgen's World War 1 cello, bearing the autographs of President Woodrow Wilson and General of the Armies John J. Pershing, is now on display at the Senate House Museum in this city.

Roentgen, former Woodstock resident who was first cellist of the Metropolitan Opera Association, presented the cello to the Senate House Association on November 10, 1953, prior to leaving for Italy, where he has taken up residence following his retirement.

The instrument bears the signatures of hundreds of World War 1 veterans who served with Roentgen in the 77th Division, as well as those of Wilson, his daughter, Margaret Woodrow Wilson; General Pershing, and General Alexander of the 77th Division.

Also noted on the instrument are the names of the places in this country and overseas visited by the noted cellist during his war service, and the words and music of a World War song.

The signatures and notations were made with a steel-pointed stylus.

Refused $10,000

It is said that at one time, while Pershing was still alive, Roentgen turned down an offer of $10,000 for the instrument. If this report is true, the cello is undoubtedly worth much more today.

Born in Amsterdam, Holland, Roentgen secured his musical education in Amsterdam, Leipzig and Paris. At 18 he began his professional career. In Zurich, Switzerland, he was first cellist with the Tonhalle Orchestra, and in Vienna, first cellist of the Imperial Royal Court Opera House.

He came to America at the outbreak of the first World War and joined the New York Symphony under Walter Damrosch.

An interruption came to his career when he entered the American Expeditionary Forces and he left with the 77th Division, 305th Headquarters Company. He saw active service in France, and noted on the cello among the locations visited are such well-known names as Chatteau Thierry and Argonne.

Gave of Talents

As he was to do in later years for his neighbors in Woodstock and Kingston, Roentgen then freely gave of his musical talent for the enjoyment of those around him.

His appearance before various Army groups in the months following the Armistice accounted for many of the signatures of top leaders of the era on his cello.

After his return, Roentgen played with the New York Symphony for a season, then went to Minneapolis as first cellist and assistant conductor of the Minneapolis Symphony. From 1930 until his recent retirement, he was first cellist with the Metropolitan Opera.

In the off-season, however, Roentgen offered his services locally, and had been general manager of the Woodstock String Quartet, bringing fine music to the area and appearing many times during the services at the St. James Methodist Church in Kingston.

Original Cantata, Cross of Christ, Will Be Presented

The Senior Choir of the Old Dutch Church will present the Lenten cantata, "The Cross of Christ," on Monday evening, March 15, at 8:00 p. m.

This work was written in 1951 by Donald Romme, Minister of Music at the Old Dutch Church, and performed by the choir there for the first time on Good Friday evening of that year. Since then the choir has sung the work in the Ellenville Reformed Church and has also given a second performance of it here in Kingston in March, 1952. In February, 1953, it was published by J. Fischer and Bro., New York, and has since been performed in numerous other cities. The work is inscribed "to the Choir of the Old Dutch Church, Kingston, New York."

The text of "The Cross of Christ" is primarily Scriptural, and based on the story of the crucifixion and the seven last words, with interpolated meditative passages taken from ancient and familiar hymn texts. The work is written for full chorus and six soloists. The Scriptural narration is sung by full male chorus, while individual solos will be sung by Susan Danford, soprano; Collette Sonnenberg, alto; Chase Page, baritone, singing the words of Jesus; Arnold Adams, bass, singing Pilate; John Hill, bass, singing the first malefactor; and Irving Levine, bass, singing the second malefactor.

Eddy Gilmore Visits With Becky Gross

Rebecca Gross, editor of the Lock Haven, Pa., Express, who lost both legs in an auto accident, talks with Eddy Gilmore at the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation at West Orange, N. J. Miss Gross is to be fitted with artificial legs and plans "to go back home and try to lead just as normal a life as possible." (AP Wirephoto)

Rebecca Gross Shows Courage in Planning Life After Accident

(This is a story of a woman's great courage. It is written by Eddy Gilmore who got to know Rebecca Gross when the editor of the Lock Haven (Pa.) Express visited Moscow last spring with a group of newspaper editors. Gilmore, for 11 years chief of the AP bureau in Moscow and now reassigned to the foreign service in London, said his visit with "Becky" was one of the unforgettable experiences of his adventuresome life.)

BY EDDY GILMORE

West Orange, N. J., March 10 (AP)—Rebecca Gross, the valiant lady editor who lost both legs in an automobile accident said she's sending for her passport.

"But Becky," I gasped, "surely you can't be thinking of traveling yet."

"Oh, no," she laughed, "not quite yet. I just wanted to find out how tall I was. Your passport is about the only document I know of that shows it."

That remark, that attitude, is so characteristic of the Lock Haven, Pa., newspaper woman who simply refuses to be sorry for herself, or to treat herself anyway but normally.

"You see," she explained in her bright quick way, "I've got to begin thinking about how tall I want to be."

I still didn't quite understand.

"I'm ordering my artificials soon," she continued, "and I've simply got to decide how tall I want to be."

Becky laughed.

"At first," she said, "I thought I might like to up myself five inches so I could see over the heads of the crowds at parades. But then I decided that would offer a real problem. I'd have to get an entirely new wardrobe, one to fit a 5 foot 10 gal. I used to be about 5 foot 5 I suppose, but I'll have to read my passport to find out for sure."

Accident Occurred New Year's Eve

What do you say to a person like that? If you don't have a hole in your head you don't say anything. You just listen in unashamed admiration to a very wonderful human being, making her way back to normalcy with dignity and a sense of humor.

Rebecca Gross lost her legs about 5 p. m. on New Year's Eve. She was driving her car through Williamsport, Pa., on the way to the airport to meet her sister, when, wham! there it was. Two cars collided at an intersection and pinned Becky against a telephone pole.

Rehabilitation at Kessler Institute

But save your sympathy for someone who needs it. Becky has no use for it. She has finished her first week at the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation in the pleasant vistas of the nearby Orange mountains.

"Right now," she explained, "I'm doing this."

She sat on a table. A 10 pound weight hung from her left leg which was suspended across an opening in the table.

"I'm getting a little more strength in that leg," she smiled.

Beck looked out of a huge window at some rolling meadows that showed a faint suggestion of spring. The last time I had sat and talked and laughed with her had been in my apartment in Moscow. Not a year ago.

"You know," she said, "you must have had a real rough time over there. Over in Russia with your Russian wife and children when they couldn't get out. You really—"

"Stop it, Becky," I interrupted, "I'm damned if I've come over here to receive your sympathy and commiseration!"

She didn't say it but she gave me a look that she hoped I hadn't come over there to give her my sympathy and commiseration.

People were all around us. People with one leg. People with no legs. People with one arm. And people with no arms. People who were rehabilitating themselves with the help of Dr. Henry Kessler. I looked at these people. A young girl. An elderly man. A man in the 40s. About 12 of them. No one appeared self conscious.

"I imagine I know what you're thinking," said Becky. "No, none of us is self conscious. That's part of the battle, you see."

We told a joke. Becky laughed again.

Return to Work

"What are you going to do when you get through here?"

"Go back home," she said, "and try to lead just as normal a life as possible."

"How long is it going to take?"

"I thought about three months, but I hear it'll probably take longer," she explained. "I'll learn to walk on one artificial leg first. With crutches. And then I'll learn to walk on both legs."

"Becky," I said, "you are splendid. People used to ask me at Moscow parties how I was able to smile and laugh all the time when it looked as if I was stuck there for life. I never told them, but I used to have my private hell about 6 o'clock in the morning when I couldn't sleep and all I could do was think."

"Mine comes at 3 a. m.," said Becky, very quietly and without a trace of emotion.

"Look," she said, changing the subject, "did you know people with no legs can have toe pains?"

She explained. With a laugh. As usual.

"Eddy," she said, "I'm getting real strong. I did 10 push ups with my hands today. Why, before my accident, all I ever got up for was to go get a drink of water. And sometimes that was an effort. Now look at me. It's easy."

Becky was conducting a safety campaign for her paper when she had her accident. Commenting on it she said:

"The place where your accident is going to happen looks like any other spot you have passed in safety a thousand times.

"I suppose I shall never drive up to any intersection again, or approach a sharp curve in the road, without thinking, 'this is the place where I may have an accident.'"

Despite her trouble, Becky doesn't preach. But she thinks that is something every American should remember—that the place where your accident is going to happen looks like any other spot you have passed in safety a thousand times.

Insurance had Lapsed

I thought Becky had had enough bad breaks, but I discovered something else, something that perhaps isn't known at all, as we sat there talking, looking out over the hills and meadows.

"Your insurance, Becky," I said, "it must cover all of this."

Becky laughed.

"Do you know," she said, "I let my accident insurance run out. I said, oh, nothing of that sort is ever going to happen to me."

I rose to go.

"Come to see us in London."

"Yes, I will, and I'll climb your stairs too."

She will. I never felt surer of anything in life.

Original Cantata, Cross of Christ, Will Be Presented

The Senior Choir of the Old Dutch Church will present the Lenten cantata, "The Cross of Christ," on Monday evening, March 15, at 8:00 p. m.

This work was written in 1951 by Donald Romme, Minister of Music at the Old Dutch Church, and performed by the choir there for the first time on Good Friday evening of that year. Since then the choir has sung the work in the Ellenville Reformed Church and has also given a second performance of it here in Kingston in March, 1952. In February, 1953, it was published by J. Fischer and Bro., New York, and has since been performed in numerous other cities. The work is inscribed "to the Choir of the Old Dutch Church, Kingston, New York."

The text of "The Cross of Christ" is primarily Scriptural, and based on the story of the crucifixion and the seven last words, with interpolated meditative passages taken from ancient and familiar hymn texts. The work is written for full chorus and six soloists. The Scriptural narration is sung by full male chorus, while individual solos will be sung by Susan Danford, soprano; Collette Sonnenberg, alto; Chase Page, baritone, singing the words of Jesus; Arnold Adams, bass, singing Pilate; John Hill, bass, singing the first malefactor; and Irving Levine, bass, singing the second malefactor.

Donald Romme will direct the service, Mrs. William Rylance will be the guest organist, and Cameron Rylance, pianist. The Rev. Arthur Oudemool is the minister.

Eddy Gilmore Visits With Becky Gross

Rebecca Gross, editor of the Lock Haven, Pa., Express, who lost both legs in an auto accident, talks with Eddy Gilmore at the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation at West Orange, N. J. Miss Gross is to be fitted with artificial legs and plans "to go back home and try to lead just as normal a life as possible." (AP Wirephoto)

Rebecca Gross Shows Courage in Planning Life After Accident

(This is a story of a woman's great courage. It is written by Eddy Gilmore who got to know Rebecca Gross when the editor of the Lock Haven (Pa.) Express visited Moscow last spring with a group of newspaper editors. Gilmore, for 11 years chief of the AP bureau in Moscow and now reassigned to the foreign service in London, said his visit with "Becky" was one of the unforgettable experiences of his adventuresome life.)

BY EDDY GILMORE

West Orange, N. J., March 10 (AP)—Rebecca Gross, the valiant lady editor who lost both legs in an automobile accident said she's sending for her passport.

"But Becky," I gasped, "surely you can't be thinking of traveling yet."

"Oh, no," she laughed, "not quite yet. I just wanted to find out how tall I was. Your passport is about the only document I know of that shows it."

That remark, that attitude, is so characteristic of the Lock Haven, Pa., newspaper woman who simply refuses to be sorry for herself, or to treat herself anyway but normally.

"You see," she explained in her bright quick way, "I've got to begin thinking about how tall I want to be."

I still didn't quite understand.

"I'm ordering my artificials soon," she continued, "and I've simply got to decide how tall I want to be."

Becky laughed.

"At first," she said, "I thought I might like to up myself five inches so I could see over the heads of the crowds at parades. But then I decided that would offer a real problem. I'd have to get an entirely new wardrobe, one to fit a 5 foot 10 gal. I used to be about 5 foot 5 I suppose, but I'll have to read my passport to find out for sure."

Accident Occurred New Year's Eve

What do you say to a person like that? If you don't have a hole in your head you don't say anything. You just listen in unashamed admiration to a very wonderful human being, making her way back to normalcy with dignity and a sense of humor.

Rebecca Gross lost her legs about 5 p. m. on New Year's Eve. She was driving her car through Williamsport, Pa., on the way to the airport to meet her sister, when, wham! there it was. Two cars collided at an intersection and pinned Becky against a telephone pole.

Rehabilitation at Kessler Institute

But save your sympathy for someone who needs it. Becky has no use for it. She has finished her first week at the Kessler Institute for Rehabilitation in the pleasant vistas of the nearby Orange mountains.

"Right now," she explained, "I'm doing this."

She sat on a table. A 10 pound weight hung from her left leg which was suspended across an opening in the table.

"I'm getting a little more strength in that leg," she smiled.

Beck looked out of a huge window at some rolling meadows that showed a faint suggestion of spring. The last time I had sat and talked and laughed with her had been in my apartment in Moscow. Not a year ago.

"You know," she said, "you must have had a real rough time over there. Over in Russia with your Russian wife and children when they couldn't get out. You really—"

"Stop it, Becky," I interrupted, "I'm damned if I've come over here to receive your sympathy and commiseration!"

She didn't say it but she gave me a look that she hoped I hadn't come over there to give her my sympathy and commiseration.

People were all around us. People with one leg. People with no legs. People with one arm. And people with no arms. People who were rehabilitating themselves with the help of Dr. Henry Kessler. I looked at these people. A young girl. An elderly man. A man in the 40s. About 12 of them. No one appeared self conscious.

"I imagine I know what you're thinking," said Becky. "No, none of us is self conscious. That's part of the battle, you see."

We told a joke. Becky laughed again.

Return to Work

"What are you going to do when you get through here?"

"Go back home," she said, "and try to lead just as normal a life as possible."

"How long is it going to take?"

"I thought about three months, but I hear it'll probably take longer," she explained. "I'll learn to walk on one artificial leg first. With crutches. And then I'll learn to walk on both legs."

"Becky," I said, "you are splendid. People used to ask me at Moscow parties how I was able to smile and laugh all the time when it looked as if I was stuck there for life. I never told them, but I used to have my private hell about 6 o'clock in the morning when I couldn't sleep and all I could do was think."

"Mine comes at 3 a. m.," said Becky, very quietly and without a trace of emotion.

"Look," she said, changing the subject, "did you know people with no legs can have toe pains?"

She explained. With a laugh. As usual.

"Eddy," she said, "I'm getting real strong. I did 10 push ups with my hands today. Why, before my accident, all I ever got up for was to go get a drink of water. And sometimes that was an effort. Now look at me. It's easy."

Becky was conducting a safety campaign for her paper when she had her accident. Commenting on it she said:

"The place where your accident is going to happen looks like any other spot you have passed in safety a thousand times.

"I suppose I shall never drive up to any intersection again, or approach a sharp curve in the road, without thinking, 'this is the place where I may have an accident.'"

Despite her trouble, Becky doesn't preach. But she thinks that is something every American should remember—that the place where your accident is going to happen looks like any other spot you have passed in safety a thousand times.

Insurance had Lapsed

I thought Becky had had enough bad breaks, but I discovered something else, something that perhaps isn't known at all, as we sat there talking, looking out over the hills and meadows.

"Your insurance, Becky," I said, "it must cover all of this."

Becky laughed.

"Do you know," she said, "I let my accident insurance run out. I said, oh, nothing of that sort is ever going to happen to me."

I rose to go.

"Come to see us in London."

"Yes, I will, and I'll climb your stairs too."

She will. I never felt surer of anything in life.

A Cigar Mumbler

A young woman tells me: "I recently have taken a position as a stenographer with a fairly large company. I do not work for any one particular man but take dictation from several. One man from whom I have to take dictation quite frequently has a habit of dictating with a cigar stuck in the corner of his mouth, making it difficult for me to understand what he is saying. Is there any way I can tactfully bring this to his attention without running the risk of loosing my job?

Frankness is the only way out. Say, "I'm sorry, I couldn't hear that last word." If you never ask him to repeat a word except when he has the cigar in his mouth, he may understand your difficulty and remove the cigar when speaking.

Telephoning Husband's Office

Dear Mrs. Post: I would appreciate your advice on the following etiquette problem: When I call my husband at his office I always say, "Hello, Miss Smith (Miss Smith is my husband's secretary), this is Grace Worthington. Is my husband in?" My mother overheard me the other day and criticized me for this. She said that, correctly, I should have announced myself as "Mrs. Worthington," and instead of saying "Is my husband in?", I should have asked 'Is Mr. Worthington in?" Which way is correct?

Answer: You should announce yourself as Mrs. Worthington. Whether you say "Is my husband in?" or "Is Mr. Worthington in?" is immaterial.

Demi-Tasse Spoons

Dear Mrs. Post: May the small coffee spoons be used with regular size coffee cups, or are these used only when serving demi-tasse. I have been given a dozen of these spoons but as I never serve demi-tasse, I was wondering if they might be used in this way?

Answer: I am sorry, but these spoons are too small to use with regular-size coffee cups.

Four Great Composers Of 1800's in Russia Discussed at Meeting

Miss Florence Gordts presented the program, a study of Russian composers of the 19th century, at the meeting of the Music Group of the Women's Club of the YWCA Thursday afternoon. This gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Ralph Harper with Mrs. Richard Holbrock as co-hostess.

Miss Cordts stated that during the 18th and 19th centuries Russia was at war almost continuously, extending her empire on all sides, but mostly toward the east of Asia. Russia was called a barbaric nation until after the Napoleonic wars, when she took her place among European nations. A new strong feeling of patriotism was awakened in the people which resulted in a new birth of Russian literature and music.

The 19th century saw the rise of two distinct schools of composers, the one with the roots in European culture, led by Anton Rubenstein, and Tschaikowsky; the other with no European ties but using the people for inspiration and guidance, led by Mikhail Glinka. Later Alex Dargomijsky and the talented circle known as the Russian Kutcha or the mighty five combined to give Russia an important place in musical history.

Glinka was the first great Russian composer, whose opera, Ivan Sousanin, was an advance on anything yet produced. The harmonic orchestral and rhythmic devices employed in this opera changed the whole face of European music.

Dargomijsky was a piano virtuoso and composer of songs who brought out dramatic realism and humorous elements of his race in his works. His fourth opera, The Stone Guest, was incomplete at his death, but was finished by Cui and Rimsky-Korsakoff. This opera is referred to as the Bible of the Russian school.

The mighty five or Kutcha consists of: Alexander Borodin, scientist, writer, organizer of a medical college for women, known best as the composer of the opera, Prince Igor, with its Polyvetsian dances. The music for the musical Kismet is based on Borodin's themes. He is considered the greatest symphonist of the mighty five.

Mily Alexevich Balakirev, considered Glinka's successor, was responsible for Russia's second renaissance of nationalist music. He was an ardent collector of folk songs of Slavic, Polish and Arabic origin.

Caesar Cui was the historian and writer for the group. Rimsky-Korsakov was the connecting link between the other group members and the Russian musicians who followed. He was the last of the national composers who dealt exclusively with local material in purely Russian style.

Sadko is regarded as the perfect fruit of his maturity, with The Czar's Bride his most popular work. The Golden Cock was finished in 1907 but the censors would not allow the production of the work with the wild, barbaric music, and the libretto based on Puskin's poems.

The fifth member of the Kutcha, Modest Moussorgsky, will be the topic for the next program.

The intense fervor of this group of composers is responsible for the triumps of Russian music. Russian opera is alive today because of their sincere expression of national character. Persecution has been unable to kill or patronage to spoil it, because it is one with the soul of the people, captured in their music, and giving joy today.

A more ideal group would be difficult to find in the history of art said Miss Cordts, as the works produced were the outcome of single-minded and clear cut convictions, but with little prospect of popular appreciation.

Recordings were played from Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, The Golden Cock; Caesar Cui, Angelo; and Song of the Sun, sung by Lily Pons.

A social hour followed with Mrs. Boyd Williams presiding at the tea table.

The next meeting will be held at the YWCA Thursday, March 18 at 2 p. m. Hostesses will be Mrs. Hans Decker and Miss Jane Austin. The program topic, Modest Moussorgsky, will be given by Mrs. Robert H. Pixley.

According to John L. Machione, esteemed leading knight, and publicity chairman of the occasion, more than 200 new members will be initiated as affiliates of lodges in Kingston, Catskill, Port Jervis, Liberty, Middletown, Newburgh and Haverstraw.

Lodges in these cities make up the East Central District of the BPOE.

The choice of Kingston as host lodge was made at a recent meeting in Newburgh attended by exalted rulers, leading knights and secretaries of lodges in the district.

The honor was bestowed on Kingston Lodge in recognition of the activities carried out during Smith's term as exalted ruler, covering all of the major projects stressed by the Grand Lodge, with emphasis on youth programs.

Representing Kingston Lodge at the Newburgh meeting were Exalted Ruler Smith, John L. Machione, esteemed leading knight; Harry Abramowitz, inner-guard; Joseph Disch, past exalted ruler and chairman of the house committee.

L. J. Butts, district deputy of East Central District, said officers for the initiation would be chosen from each of the lodges in the territory for the initiation.

National and state officers of the Elks will attend as honored guests.

Dr. Reynolds is a graduate of Rutgers University, New Brunswick, N. J., and the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, Baltimore. He is completing his internship at the Johns Hopkins Hospital where he will become an assistant resident doctor on July 1.

W. Irving Rose Will Play Leading Role In Comedy, Harvey

When the Rotary presents the Coach House Players in the smash comedy hit "Harvey" at the George Washington School on March 24 and 25, W. Irving Rose will be seen in the leading role of Elwood P. Dowd, a calm amiable bachelor who took up with a large rabbit, six feet one and one-half inches tall and named him Harvey.

Terry Roberts will be playing Elwood's sister, Veta Louise, who is baffled by her brother's insistence that his closest friend is an oversized rabbit and Rose Helen Mellert will be seen as his equally distressed niece, Myrtle Mae. It is Veta Louise's decision to have Elwood committed to a high class sanitarium so that she and Myrtle Mae might have a normal social life, uncomplicated by an illusionary rabbit's presence, that sparks the chain of uproarious situations in the comedy.

One of the most hilarious scenes in Harvey from all reports, comes when the doctors of the Sanitarium decide that it's Veta Louise who needs committing, partly because she had begun to see Harvey too. Elwood on the other hand seems merely pleasant and reasonable even though he does carry around a man's hat with 2 holes punched in the top for Harvey's ears.

Others in the cast will include Mary Becker, Bernard Pine, Francis Matteson, Teresa Lloyd, Edward Guziak, Harriet Engelen, Louise Brokenshaw, Norman Shapiro and Duke Steeley.

Though Harvey is supposedly never seen during the entire action of the play he is said to be so persuasive that he begins to grow on audiences until presently they have little doubt they will be seeing him themselves.

Tickets are available from members of Rotary Club and Coach House Players.

A Cigar Mumbler

A young woman tells me: "I recently have taken a position as a stenographer with a fairly large company. I do not work for any one particular man but take dictation from several. One man from whom I have to take dictation quite frequently has a habit of dictating with a cigar stuck in the corner of his mouth, making it difficult for me to understand what he is saying. Is there any way I can tactfully bring this to his attention without running the risk of loosing my job?

Frankness is the only way out. Say, "I'm sorry, I couldn't hear that last word." If you never ask him to repeat a word except when he has the cigar in his mouth, he may understand your difficulty and remove the cigar when speaking.

Telephoning Husband's Office

Dear Mrs. Post: I would appreciate your advice on the following etiquette problem: When I call my husband at his office I always say, "Hello, Miss Smith (Miss Smith is my husband's secretary), this is Grace Worthington. Is my husband in?" My mother overheard me the other day and criticized me for this. She said that, correctly, I should have announced myself as "Mrs. Worthington," and instead of saying "Is my husband in?", I should have asked 'Is Mr. Worthington in?" Which way is correct?

Answer: You should announce yourself as Mrs. Worthington. Whether you say "Is my husband in?" or "Is Mr. Worthington in?" is immaterial.

Demi-Tasse Spoons

Dear Mrs. Post: May the small coffee spoons be used with regular size coffee cups, or are these used only when serving demi-tasse. I have been given a dozen of these spoons but as I never serve demi-tasse, I was wondering if they might be used in this way?

Answer: I am sorry, but these spoons are too small to use with regular-size coffee cups.

Soloists Prepare for KHS Band-Orchestra Concert

Four Great Composers Of 1800's in Russia Discussed at Meeting

Miss Florence Gordts presented the program, a study of Russian composers of the 19th century, at the meeting of the Music Group of the Women's Club of the YWCA Thursday afternoon. This gathering was held at the home of Mrs. Ralph Harper with Mrs. Richard Holbrock as co-hostess.

Miss Cordts stated that during the 18th and 19th centuries Russia was at war almost continuously, extending her empire on all sides, but mostly toward the east of Asia. Russia was called a barbaric nation until after the Napoleonic wars, when she took her place among European nations. A new strong feeling of patriotism was awakened in the people which resulted in a new birth of Russian literature and music.

The 19th century saw the rise of two distinct schools of composers, the one with the roots in European culture, led by Anton Rubenstein, and Tschaikowsky; the other with no European ties but using the people for inspiration and guidance, led by Mikhail Glinka. Later Alex Dargomijsky and the talented circle known as the Russian Kutcha or the mighty five combined to give Russia an important place in musical history.

Glinka was the first great Russian composer, whose opera, Ivan Sousanin, was an advance on anything yet produced. The harmonic orchestral and rhythmic devices employed in this opera changed the whole face of European music.

Dargomijsky was a piano virtuoso and composer of songs who brought out dramatic realism and humorous elements of his race in his works. His fourth opera, The Stone Guest, was incomplete at his death, but was finished by Cui and Rimsky-Korsakoff. This opera is referred to as the Bible of the Russian school.

The mighty five or Kutcha consists of: Alexander Borodin, scientist, writer, organizer of a medical college for women, known best as the composer of the opera, Prince Igor, with its Polyvetsian dances. The music for the musical Kismet is based on Borodin's themes. He is considered the greatest symphonist of the mighty five.

Mily Alexevich Balakirev, considered Glinka's successor, was responsible for Russia's second renaissance of nationalist music. He was an ardent collector of folk songs of Slavic, Polish and Arabic origin.

Caesar Cui was the historian and writer for the group. Rimsky-Korsakov was the connecting link between the other group members and the Russian musicians who followed. He was the last of the national composers who dealt exclusively with local material in purely Russian style.

Sadko is regarded as the perfect fruit of his maturity, with The Czar's Bride his most popular work. The Golden Cock was finished in 1907 but the censors would not allow the production of the work with the wild, barbaric music, and the libretto based on Puskin's poems.

The fifth member of the Kutcha, Modest Moussorgsky, will be the topic for the next program.

The intense fervor of this group of composers is responsible for the triumps of Russian music. Russian opera is alive today because of their sincere expression of national character. Persecution has been unable to kill or patronage to spoil it, because it is one with the soul of the people, captured in their music, and giving joy today.

A more ideal group would be difficult to find in the history of art said Miss Cordts, as the works produced were the outcome of single-minded and clear cut convictions, but with little prospect of popular appreciation.

Recordings were played from Rimsky-Korsakoff's opera, The Golden Cock; Caesar Cui, Angelo; and Song of the Sun, sung by Lily Pons.

A social hour followed with Mrs. Boyd Williams presiding at the tea table.

The next meeting will be held at the YWCA Thursday, March 18 at 2 p. m. Hostesses will be Mrs. Hans Decker and Miss Jane Austin. The program topic, Modest Moussorgsky, will be given by Mrs. Robert H. Pixley.

Hargrave to Take Supervisory Part In Vaccine Trials

Dr. Dudley W. Hargrave, Ulster county health commissioner today welcomed the selection of Ulster county for polio vaccine trials and said the Public Health Department will cooperate fully with the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis in carrying out this "historic project."

Dr. Hargrave said his office will supervise the tests and will call upon local doctors, nurses, volunteer citizens and representatives of the National Foundation for assistance.

All school children in the first, second and third grades will participate in the tests upon written request of their parents. Each child will be given three doses over approximately a five-week period of time. One-half of the children participating will receive a trial vaccine against polio and the other half will get a substitute which looks exactly like the trial vaccine but has no effect.

To Study Results Later

No one taking part in the trials, not even the medical authorities, will know which child receives the vaccine and which receives the substitute. Coded identification will not be interpreted until the results are studied later. The health records of children receiving the substitute are needed for comparison in the scientific evaluation of the trial vaccine's effectiveness in preventing paralytic polio. Date for the start of the tests locally will be announced later.

This project constitutes the largest test program of its kind in medical history, Dr. Hargrave stated. Its purpose is to determine the effectiveness of a trial vaccine in preventing paralytic polio. It represents the climax of years of research and the expenditure of millions of dollars contributed by the public through the March of Dimes."

He pointed out that the test had been endorsed by scientific and medical groups, including the American Academy of Pediatrics and an Advisory Committee of the Association of State and Territorial Health Officers. He also emphasized the safety precautions surrounding the test.

"The National Foundation will not make the vaccine available until three elaborate and separate safety tests have been made on every batch produced," he explained.

Vaccinates Own Son

The vaccine to be used in the nationwide study was developed by a research grantee of the National Foundation, Dr. Jonas E. Salk of the University of Pittsburgh. Dr. Salk already has given the trial vaccine to thousands of children and adults in the Pittsburgh area, including his own three sons. He has reported that no untoward reactions followed.

Local doctors assisted by nurses will administer doses of a pinkish, watery substance to pupils in the first, second and third grades whose parents sign a request form. Each child will receive one cc of either the trial vaccine or an innocuous substance—which look exactly alike—in the arm. One week later a second one-cc dose will be given and at least four weeks later a third or "booster" dose—also one-cc—will complete the series.

Will Know in 1955

Preliminary results of the test will not be known until some time in 1955. The record of the children receiving the vaccine will be compared with polio incidence in the "control" group. The evaluation will be an independent study made by a group of scientists headed by Dr. Thomas Francis, Jr., of the University of Michigan, leading authority on epidemics.

"If this test proves that a vaccine will prevent paralytic polio, we and our children can take pride in the fact that we have had this opportunity to demonstrate its usefulness." Dr. Hargrave said.

LARGEST FURNITURE DISPLAY IN HUDSON VALLEY ON ONE FLOOR

Kingston Tops Monties; Meets Nott Terrace in Finals Friday

Bezemer Tallies 32, Excels Again On Rebound Play

Last Quarter Rally Decides Outcome

Thanks to a terrific burst of scoring power displayed in the final quarter of its game Tuesday night at the Kate Walton Field House, Kingston High School will meet Nott Terrace of Schenectady in the finals of the New York State Intersectional Tournament Friday night at the new Troy High School gym.

That much was certain today after the Maroons, apparently very much recovered after their tough one-point loss in a bid for the 1953-54 DUSO League bunting last Saturday night, upended Mont Pleasant High School by 77 to 66.

It all may sound like sour grapes in some quarters, but Kingston, in all probability, would be holding the DUSO crown today if its performance last night had been the same against Poughkeepsie.

28-Point Finale

Although trailing until the fourth quarter, Kingston's sharpshooters were "alive" and a sizzling fourth quarter rally netting the club 28 points proved the point.

But be that as it may, Kingston will still battle Nott Terrace for the intersectional championship Friday night in Troy. Game time is set for 8 o'clock and a consolation clash at 7 o'clock will bring together Newburgh Free Academy, beaten by Nott Terrace, and Mont Pleasant, last night's losers to Kingston.

Coach G. Warren Kias announced this morning that plenty of seats are available for the intersectional clash. The Troy gym, built at a cost of about $1,000,000 in a school construction setting back the Troy Board of Education about $5,000,000, seats 3,500. Reservation for several bus loads of fans started today and indications are that Kingston will have plenty of backers by game time Friday night. The Troy High School gym is located one block above RPI.

Bezemer Has 33 Rebounds

It was flashy Dick Bezemer, Kingston's ace center, who supplied the fireworks for the Maroon win last night. The expert rebound artist established another rebound record as he pulled 33 rebounds off the boards while leading the club with 32 points. Bezemer hit for 12 fields and added eight charity stripe tosses.

Bill Haber, who nearly wrecked Poughkeepsie last Saturday night with his outstanding play, continued to dazzle as he came up with 10 rebounds and added 13 points to the KHS total. Haber dropped in a pair of deuces but perked up his scoring ledger with nine foul conversions.

With Kingston dominating the boards all night, the writing was on the wall for Mont Pleasant despite the visitors scoring edge in the early part of play.

Some terrific shooting by Larry Loudis, Lou Jordan and Bob Blaha kept Mont Pleasant's hopes alive for an upset victory but this all went out the window when Kingston began to hit on all fours in the final period of play.

Kingston led Mont Pleasant by 17 to 15 in the first period but an 18-point midway gave the Dorpian City quintet the lead at halftime by 33 to 32. The visitors still held the upperhand during the third period and led going into the final stanza by 52 to 49.

The Maroons' high-1powered attack really clicked in the final period, however, as the Kiasmen staggered Mont Pleasant with 28 points to decide the outcome. Mont Pleasant was held to 14 in the final canto.

Brodhead Hits 14

Skip Brodhead was the No. 2 scorer for the Maroons with 14 points. Haber's 13 followed while John Godwin, who sat out the first half, came back and scored 11 in his only two periods of action.

Loudis rifled in 27 for Mont Pleasant. Jordan and Blaha each accounted for 10 markers.

In the prelim last night, the Senior Intramural champions scored a 49 to 45 victory over the Sophomore Intramural champs. Bill Fitzgerald scored 15 to lead the winners. Phil McCloskey added 13 and Don Schroeder picked up 10. Butch Whalen's 14 points paced the losers.

Turner Meets Jones

Philadelphia, March 10 (AP)—Philadelphia's Gil Turner, a welterweight turned middleweight, may reverse the procedure if he is upset by Oakland Bobby Jones tonight in their nationally televised (CBS) 10 round scrap at the arena. Turner's manager, George Katz, says he's seriously thinking of dropping his tiger back into the 147 pound ranks even if he wins. Katz, of course, is thinking along the lines of welter champ Kid Gavilan winning the middleweight title from Bobo Olson in their coming fight.

The opening bout goes on at 8:45 p. m.

Jayhawks Are Upset, 76-67 In Big Seven

New York, March 10 (AP)—Only one spot remained to be filled in the round of 16 in the NCAA basketball tourneys today—and that vacancy is the result of one of the most stunning upsets in Big Seven history.

Missouri, with a mediocre 5-6 record in conference play, surged from behind in the third quarter to defeat Dr. Phog Allen's Kansas Jayhawks 76-67 last night and send the loop into a deadlock for first place.

Now both Kansas and Colorado boast 10-2 records and the NCAA representative will be decided by a draw from a hat late today in Kansas City.

Kentucky Withdraws

Kentucky, winner of the Southeastern Conference, withdrew from the NCAA tournament because its three big stars were ineligible. Without Cliff Hagan, Frank Ramsey and Lou Tsioropolos, who are not permitted to perform in NCAA post-season competition because they are graduate students, the Wildcats couldn't hope to win the tournament.

They captured the league crown last night in a playoff with Louisiana State 63-56 and immediately announced they would bypass the NCAA. Louisiana State, which finished the loop season with a 14-0 slate, the same as Kentucky, was given the berth.

Thus the No. 1 team in the Associated Press poll, ended its season unbeaten in 25 games, a record achieved by few schools over the years.

One other conference champion was decided when Cornell whipped Princeton 46-44 in a playoff for the Ivy League title, while Santa Clara, Penn State, Notre Dame, Bradley and Idaho State gained their round of 16 berths in the tournament.

Cornell's victory over Princeton in Philadelphia was a notable one because the Big Red from Ithaca had not won an Ivy League championship since 1924. Henry Buncom, a substitute, made just one field goal and that was the winning one with exactly one second to go.

Santa Clara was a 73-64 victor over Texas Tech and Idaho State scored at 77-75 triumph over Seattle at Corvallis, Ore. in overtime. This one was another major reversal in view of the fact that Seattle had run up a 26-game winning streak since losing its opener.

Irish Win 80-70

At Fort Wayne, Ind., Penn State turned back Toledo 62-50 with a late scoring burst and Notre Dame whipped Loyola of the South 80-70 for its 17th straight.

In the single game at Peoria, Bradley rolled over Oklahoma City 61-55 on the strength of Bob Carney's 27 points.

The National Invitation tournament in Madison Square Garden went according to form last night as top-seeded Duquesne and Holy Cross gained the semi-final round. The Dukes won a struggle from St. Francis of Loretto, Pa., 69-63, while Holy Cross crushed St. Francis of Brooklyn, 93-69.

Moore Scores TKO Win Over Baker in Miami

Miami Beach, Fla., March 10 (AP)—Light heavyweight champion Archie Moore said today he "felt wonderful" as he carried 190¼ pounds—the greatest fighting weight of his career—to a slashing non-title victory last night over Bob Baker.

Referee Petey Sarron stopped the Miami Beach Auditorium battle at 2:08 of the ninth round with Baker reeling under a savage attack by Moore and bleeding from the mouth, nose and cuts over both eyes.

Still dreaming of a crack at Rocky Marciano's heavyweight crown, Moore declared he "felt fine" at 15¼ pounds over the limit for the class he rules.

"If I could get Rocky to fight me," he said, "I'd train down some, maybe to around 181 pounds."

Moore's weight, which he carried beautifully, left ringside experts doubtful that he would again be able to make the 175-pound light heavyweight limit without weakening himself badly.

New York (St. Nicholas Arena)—Carmelo Costa, 127¾, Brooklyn, outpointed Al Tisi, 124½, New York, 8.

USC Student Sizzles at Plate In Early Games With Cleveland

Young Infielder Hitting at .591

(By The Associated Press)

Rookie Rudy Regalado, an infielder by trade and a terrific hitter by the looks of things, is the player they are all talking about in the camp of the Cleveland Indians.

Twenty-three years old and a student at the University of Southern California, Regalado is making sure Manager Al Lopez knows he's around.

Yesterday, he connected for two home runs and a pair of singles as the Indians walloped the Chicago Cubs 17-6.

The youngster's bat has been sizzling all spring. In 22 times at bat, he's collected 13 hits for a .591 average. Five of his safeties have been homers and he's batted in 11 runs.

Regalado has had only a year of professional experience. He played most of last season with Reading of the Eastern League where he batted .325. Then he was sent to Indianapolis.

Actually, Rudy still is on the Indianapolis roster, but if he keeps up his present pace he's a cinch to stick with Cleveland. He has played second base and third.

Meanwhile, the other Cleveland players haven't been twiddling their thumbs. In fact, the Tribe has compiled 64 runs in four games they've played — or an average of 16 per game.

Rosen Hits Grand Slam

Al Rosen, the American League's most valuable player in 1953, chipped in with a bases loaded homer in yesterday's triumph. Outfielder Dave Philley and Wally Westlake and first baseman Billy Glynn also hit drives out of the park for the Indians as did Bruce Edwards for the Cubs.

The Indians play the Baltimore Orioles today and that one could develop into a real humdinger.

The Orioles still are unbeaten this spring. They came from behind with a pair of ninth-inning runs yesterday to down the New York Giants 10-9.

Sam Mele and Jim Fridley hit home runs for Baltimore while Hank Thompson connected with two and Ray Katt one for the Giants.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Solly Hemus, seeking to hold onto his regular shortstop job, drove out four hits, the last a three-run triple in the 11th inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 10-9 decision over the Chicago White Sox. Harvey Haddix pitched the first four innings for St. Louis and held the Chisox to two hits.

Bosox Top Yankees

Bonus baby Billy Consolo doubled home the tieing and winning runs as the Boston Red Sox scored four times in the ninth inning to defeat the New York Yankees 6-5. The Yankees had exploded for four runs in the top of the frame when four straight pinch-hitters produced hits. Hershell Freeman was the winning pitcher.

The Detroit Tigers picked up their first triumph of the year, edging the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 at Lakeland, Fla. A triple by second baseman Harry Bright scored Johnny Bucha with the winning run in the ninth.

The Milwaukee-Pittsburgh and Brooklyn-Cincinnati games were canceled because of rain. Washington and Philadelphia Athletics were not scheduled.

At Cambridge, Mass., surgeons wired Ted Williams' fractured left collarbone and the slugging Red Sox outfielder should be ready to play in about eight weeks.

Kingston Tops Monties; Meets Nott Terrace in Finals Friday

Bezemer Tallies 32, Excels Again On Rebound Play

Last Quarter Rally Decides Outcome

Thanks to a terrific burst of scoring power displayed in the final quarter of its game Tuesday night at the Kate Walton Field House, Kingston High School will meet Nott Terrace of Schenectady in the finals of the New York State Intersectional Tournament Friday night at the new Troy High School gym.

That much was certain today after the Maroons, apparently very much recovered after their tough one-point loss in a bid for the 1953-54 DUSO League bunting last Saturday night, upended Mont Pleasant High School by 77 to 66.

It all may sound like sour grapes in some quarters, but Kingston, in all probability, would be holding the DUSO crown today if its performance last night had been the same against Poughkeepsie.

28-Point Finale

Although trailing until the fourth quarter, Kingston's sharpshooters were "alive" and a sizzling fourth quarter rally netting the club 28 points proved the point.

But be that as it may, Kingston will still battle Nott Terrace for the intersectional championship Friday night in Troy. Game time is set for 8 o'clock and a consolation clash at 7 o'clock will bring together Newburgh Free Academy, beaten by Nott Terrace, and Mont Pleasant, last night's losers to Kingston.

Coach G. Warren Kias announced this morning that plenty of seats are available for the intersectional clash. The Troy gym, built at a cost of about $1,000,000 in a school construction setting back the Troy Board of Education about $5,000,000, seats 3,500. Reservation for several bus loads of fans started today and indications are that Kingston will have plenty of backers by game time Friday night. The Troy High School gym is located one block above RPI.

Bezemer Has 33 Rebounds

It was flashy Dick Bezemer, Kingston's ace center, who supplied the fireworks for the Maroon win last night. The expert rebound artist established another rebound record as he pulled 33 rebounds off the boards while leading the club with 32 points. Bezemer hit for 12 fields and added eight charity stripe tosses.

Bill Haber, who nearly wrecked Poughkeepsie last Saturday night with his outstanding play, continued to dazzle as he came up with 10 rebounds and added 13 points to the KHS total. Haber dropped in a pair of deuces but perked up his scoring ledger with nine foul conversions.

With Kingston dominating the boards all night, the writing was on the wall for Mont Pleasant despite the visitors scoring edge in the early part of play.

Some terrific shooting by Larry Loudis, Lou Jordan and Bob Blaha kept Mont Pleasant's hopes alive for an upset victory but this all went out the window when Kingston began to hit on all fours in the final period of play.

Kingston led Mont Pleasant by 17 to 15 in the first period but an 18-point midway gave the Dorpian City quintet the lead at halftime by 33 to 32. The visitors still held the upperhand during the third period and led going into the final stanza by 52 to 49.

The Maroons' high-1powered attack really clicked in the final period, however, as the Kiasmen staggered Mont Pleasant with 28 points to decide the outcome. Mont Pleasant was held to 14 in the final canto.

Brodhead Hits 14

Skip Brodhead was the No. 2 scorer for the Maroons with 14 points. Haber's 13 followed while John Godwin, who sat out the first half, came back and scored 11 in his only two periods of action.

Loudis rifled in 27 for Mont Pleasant. Jordan and Blaha each accounted for 10 markers.

In the prelim last night, the Senior Intramural champions scored a 49 to 45 victory over the Sophomore Intramural champs. Bill Fitzgerald scored 15 to lead the winners. Phil McCloskey added 13 and Don Schroeder picked up 10. Butch Whalen's 14 points paced the losers.

The Orioles still are unbeaten this spring. They came from behind with a pair of ninth-inning runs yesterday to down the New York Giants 10-9.

Sam Mele and Jim Fridley hit home runs for Baltimore while Hank Thompson connected with two and Ray Katt one for the Giants.

At St. Petersburg, Fla., Solly Hemus, seeking to hold onto his regular shortstop job, drove out four hits, the last a three-run triple in the 11th inning to give the St. Louis Cardinals a 10-9 decision over the Chicago White Sox. Harvey Haddix pitched the first four innings for St. Louis and held the Chisox to two hits.

Bosox Top Yankees

Bonus baby Billy Consolo doubled home the tieing and winning runs as the Boston Red Sox scored four times in the ninth inning to defeat the New York Yankees 6-5. The Yankees had exploded for four runs in the top of the frame when four straight pinch-hitters produced hits. Hershell Freeman was the winning pitcher.

The Detroit Tigers picked up their first triumph of the year, edging the Philadelphia Phillies 6-5 at Lakeland, Fla. A triple by second baseman Harry Bright scored Johnny Bucha with the winning run in the ninth.

The Milwaukee-Pittsburgh and Brooklyn-Cincinnati games were canceled because of rain. Washington and Philadelphia Athletics were not scheduled.

At Cambridge, Mass., surgeons wired Ted Williams' fractured left collarbone and the slugging Red Sox outfielder should be ready to play in about eight weeks.

Rapp Juniors Win Midget Rec Cage Crown

Foul Shots Win For NY Knicks

(By The Associated Press)

At this late stage of the NBA race, the New York Knickerbockers will take their victories any way they can get them—even from the free throw line.

Faced with the prospect of playing two tough road games, the Knicks were successful in the first one last night, defeating the Milwaukee Hawks 72-65.

Now, all Joe Lapchick's men have to do is knock off the Lakers at Minneapolis tonight and the worst they can do is finish in a tie for first place in the Eastern Division.

After the Lakers' clash, they'll have two games remaining — a home and home series with Syracuse over the weekend. Those two might tell the whole story, particularly since the Nats and Boston are deadlocked for second place, two and a half games out.

The Knicks potted 32 free throws in their game with the Hawks and as each team hit for 20 field goals, the conversions were the difference. Harry Gallatin was high for New York with 15 points. Bill Calhoun also had 15 for Milwaukee.

Pino Top Scorer With 30 Points

Rapp Juniors were crowned champions of the Midget Recreation Basketball League Monday night when they scored a 49 to 30 victory over the National Juniors at the MJM court.

Rapps, led by Bud Tomaseski, who netted 15 points, went through the entire season and post-season Shaughnessy playoffs without losing a game. Monday's victory over the Nationals was their second in the best two out of three series.

Rapps picked up a 12-8 lead at the first quarter and led at halftime by 21 to 14. Two big scoring pushes in the third and fourth quarters, 13 and 15 points respectively, brought Rapps to the 19-point victory.

Tomaseski tossed in six fields and three fouls for his 15 points. McCloskey and Woods each bucketed nine for the winners. High for the National Juniors was Juhl who accounted for nine markers.

Celtics Top Preps

In the afterpiece Monday night, the Celtics, by virtue of their 85 to 64 victory over the Preps, will now meet Maines Sport Shop in the best two out of three game series for the championship of the Junior Division of the Recreation Basketball League. The first game of this series is scheduled tonight at 7:30 o'clock at the MJM court.

Joe Pino with 30 points and Bill Fitzgerald with 25 were the top scorers for the Celts while Andy Lee hit for 15 for the Preps. Lorenzo Giannuzzi had 13 for the Preps.

Duquesne Squeaks Through NIT Win

New York, March 10 (AP)—Top-seeded Duquesne was over its first hurdles in the National Invitation Tournament today, and Coach Dudey Moore hopes his boys have learned their lesson.

The Dukes had to go all-out in the second half to gain a 69-63 victory over St. Francis of Loretto, Pa., a team they had beaten once by 25 points and another time by 30, in the NIT quarter-finals last night at Madison Square Garden.

They'll meet fourth-seeded Niagara in one semi-final tomorrow night, with second-seeded Western Kentucky taking on Holy Cross, the third seeded team, in the other semi-final.

Holy Cross advanced with an easy 93-69 triumph over another St. Francis, this one from Brooklyn. Western Kentucky and Niagara qualified Monday night.

Coach Sounds Warning

"We were upset by their drive and hustle for awhile," Moore said after Duquesne had chalked up its 23rd victory in 25 starts. "Then, too, we were a little lethargic on defense."

Looking around the dressing room at his players, he added:

"I hope they know now they'll have to hustle more against Niagara."

Duquesne also has beaten Niagara twice previously this season, but with more difficulty than it experienced in its first two games against St. Francis.

Dick Ricketts, Duquesne's second team All-America, was outplayed last night by 6-6 Maurice Stokes, St. Francis' one-man team. Battling Ricketts, Jim Tucker and Fletcher Johnson under the boards, Stokes got more than his share of rebounds and was leading Ricketts 26-23 when the lanky Dukes' star fouled out in the final minute. He wound up with 28, two more than Duquesne's sophomore sensation, Si Green.

Honolulu—Reno Abellira, 158¼, Honlulu, outpointed Jesse Fuentes, 162, Los Angeles, 10.

The tire sensation in 1953! Now Goodyear announces still greater improvements!

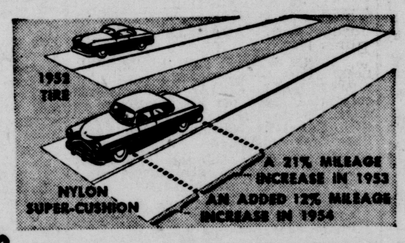
New 1954 All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushion

All-Nylon Cord! Up to 80% stronger than standard tires!

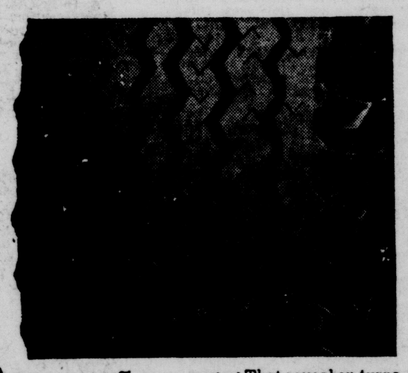
And now! 3 great 1954 Extras!
✔ Even more mileage than last year!
✔ Much greater skid protection than in 1953!
✔ Quieter ride—less squeal on turns!

COSTS ONLY A FEW DOLLARS MORE THAN A STANDARD TIRE! NO OTHER TIRE AT OR NEAR ITS PRICE CAN MATCH IT!

1 Hits test curb at 55 mph! Not a cord broken! This is just one of the punishing tests this All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushion has taken! In fact, impact blowouts are almost unheard of with All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushions.



2 Up to 12% more mileage! This mileage boost comes right on the heels of a 21% increase in 1953. Total . . . almost ⅓ more safe mileage than most motorists ever experienced before! That's real money in your pocket in reduced driving costs.



3 Quieter ride! 15% greater traction! That squeal on turns has been practically eliminated by a new anti-vibration tread design. And this new tread has 1806 inches of nonskid edges, 880 deep-cut safety slots for 15% greater skid resistance. You'll get quicker, safer stops, better skid resistance with this new tire.

There's a big difference in Nylon cord! Only Goodyear has Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon!

Nylon is the best tire cord—if the stretch can be controlled. Nylon is naturally stronger, pound for pound, than steel; it makes a lighter weight, cooler running, longer wearing tire. But, unless properly pre-conditioned, Nylon stretches under tension.

To control the stretch in Nylon cord, Goodyear has developed an exclusive process of chemically treating the cord and then putting it through a triple-tempering process involving Tension, Temperature and Time. The result—Goodyear's Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord—the Nylon cord that is fully controlled at its point of maximum strength and resiliency.

Be sure your Nylon cord tires are made with Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord—and that means Goodyear!

MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES THAN ON ANY OTHER KIND!

Duquesne Squeaks Through NIT Win

New York, March 10 (AP)—Top-seeded Duquesne was over its first hurdles in the National Invitation Tournament today, and Coach Dudey Moore hopes his boys have learned their lesson.

The Dukes had to go all-out in the second half to gain a 69-63 victory over St. Francis of Loretto, Pa., a team they had beaten once by 25 points and another time by 30, in the NIT quarterfinals last night at Madison Square Garden.

They'll meet fourth-seeded Niagara in one semi-final tomorrow night, with second-seeded Western Kentucky taking on Holy Cross, the third seeded team, in the other semi-final.

Holy Cross advanced with an easy 93-69 triumph over another St. Francis, this one from Brooklyn. Western Kentucky and Niagara qualified Monday night.

Coach Sounds Warning

"We were upset by their drive and hustle for awhile," Moore said after Duquesne had chalked up its 23rd victory in 25 starts. "Then, too, we were a little lethargic on defense."

Looking around the dressing room at his players, he added:

"I hope they know now they'll have to hustle more against Niagara."

Duquesne also has beaten Niagara twice previously this season, but with more difficulty than it experienced in its first two games against St. Francis.

Dick Ricketts, Duquesne's second team All-America, was outplayed last night by 6-6 Maurice Stokes, St. Francis' one-man team. Battling Ricketts, Jim Tucker and Fletcher Johnson under the boards, Stokes got more than his share of rebounds and was leading Ricketts 26-23 when the lanky Dukes' star fouled out in the final minute. He wound up with 28, two more than Duquesne's sophomore sensation, Si Green.

Honolulu—Reno Abellira, 158¼, Honlulu, outpointed Jesse Fuentes, 162, Los Angeles, 10.

The tire sensation in 1953! Now Goodyear announces still greater improvements!

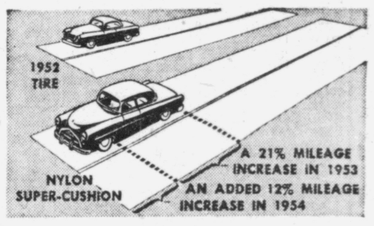
New 1954 All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushion

All-Nylon Cord! Up to 80% stronger than standard tires!

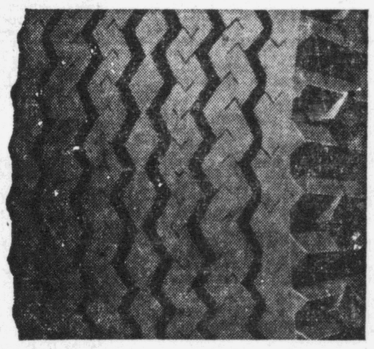
And now! 3 great 1954 Extras!
✓ Even more mileage than last year!
✓ Much greater skid protection than in 1953!
✓ Quieter ride—less squeal on turns!

COSTS ONLY A FEW DOLLARS MORE THAN A STANDARD TIRE! NO OTHER TIRE AT OR NEAR ITS PRICE CAN MATCH IT!

1 Hits test curb at 55 mph! Not a cord broken! This is just one of the punishing tests this All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushion has taken! In fact, impact blowouts are almost unheard of with All-Nylon Cord Super-Cushions.



2 Up to 12% more mileage! This mileage boost comes right on the heels of a 21% increase in 1953. Total . . . almost ⅓ more safe mileage than most motorists ever experienced before! That's real money in your pocket in reduced driving costs.



3 Quieter ride! 15% greater traction! That squeal on turns has been practically eliminated by a new anti-vibration tread design. And this new tread has 1806 inches of nonskid edges, 880 deep-cut safety slots for 15% greater skid resistance. You'll get quicker, safer stops, better skid resistance with this new tire.

There's a big difference in Nylon cord! Only Goodyear has Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon!

Nylon is the best tire cord—if the stretch can be controlled. Nylon is naturally stronger, pound for pound, than steel; it makes a lighter weight, cooler running, longer wearing tire. But, unless properly pre-conditioned, Nylon stretches under tension.

To control the stretch in Nylon cord, Goodyear has developed an exclusive process of chemically treating the cord and then putting it through a triple-tempering process involving Tension, Temperature and Time. The result—Goodyear's Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord—the Nylon cord that is fully controlled at its point of maximum strength and resiliency.

Be sure your Nylon cord tires are made with Triple-Tempered 3-T Nylon Cord—and that means Goodyear!

MORE PEOPLE RIDE ON GOODYEAR TIRES THAN ON ANY OTHER KIND!

Rural Areas Now Offering Courses For Adult Study

Adult education, for many years a popular part of the program in larger city and central of consolidated schools, is spreading to the small rural school.

Approximately 155 persons are registered in nine adult evening classes meeting in five small rural schools in Supervisory District No. 1, serving the area in Ulster county surrounding the city of Kingston.

In addition, several classes in automobile driving are being planned to start as soon as arrangements are completed for obtaining the properly equipped automobile.

Pastor Teaches Art

The adult program in the area's rural schools traces its beginning to a class in oil painting offered at the Rosendale village school by the Rev. Albert H. Shultis, pastor of the Rosendale Reformed Church.

The class was offered on a free basis, but the interest shown resulted about the middle of the current school year in the establishment of other classes in a variety of subjects under the state aided program.

The Rev. Mr. Shultis, in addition to his Rosendale class, now instructs an oil painting class at the Tillson school. Also at the Tillson school is a sewing class taught by Mrs. Floyd Ellsworth. This class had an original enrollment of 14, but almost immediately after it began the enrollment grew to 29.

Glasco Has Courses

At the Glasco school, there are classes in typing, with Mrs. Ann Mahoney as teacher; sewing, instructed by Miss Muriel Ferraro, and knitting, taught by Mrs. Wanda Dunham.

Mrs. Dunham also teaches a knitting class at the Emma Wygant School at Flatbush. A rug making class at the same school is taught by Mrs. Thomas Goodman.

A rug making class in the Maple Hill school is instructed by Mrs. Walter Hilterbrandt.

There is sufficient registration at the Emma Wygant school for a driver education class, and this is expected to start within the next two or three weeks. Another driver education class is being discussed for the Glasco school.

Each school district acts independently in setting up adult education programs, although in each of the districts within the area the trustees have named Reginald D. Russell as director of adult education. Russell's regular position is elementary supervisor for the Board of Cooperative Services, for the first district of Ulster county, of which Clarence A. Johnson is superintendent. The Board maintains an office at 286 Wall street, Kingston.

Popularity Grows

Although adult education programs in larger schools date back 25 or 30 years, when the classes mainly were citizenship classes for foreign-born residents, the program has become increasingly popular in recent years and particularly since World War 2.

Rural schools, however, were slower to take up the program. This was due in a large measure, Russell has explained, to the difficulties in obtaining the necessary equipment and facilities.

Before the present courses could be offered in the small schools in Ulster county's first supervisory district, arrangements had to be made, for instance, for the loan of sewing machines by the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and rental of typewriters from Ben Sklon of Kingston. Arrangements are now being made with Martin-Moran, Dodge-Plymouth dealers of Kingston, for the automobile to be used in driver training classes.

Courses meet generally one evening a week.

Costs are met by the school district with a portion of the costs being reimbursed by the state. There is no charge to the person taking the course, except that they must provide any consumable material used, such as the material for making rugs or knitted articles.

After putting down new linoleum, be sure to give it a coat of wax at once. This will seal the pores and make it wear much longer.

Art and Dressmaking Courses Popular

Group studies art under direction of the Rev. Albert Shultis at Rosendale school.

Buy Good Paint Brushes

You'll save yourself a lot of headaches if you spend a little more money when buying paint brushes. The bristles of cheap brushes come loose when painting and thus do not guarantee a smooth coat.

Rural Areas Now Offering Courses For Adult Study

Adult education, for many years a popular part of the program in larger city and central of consolidated schools, is spreading to the small rural school.

Approximately 155 persons are registered in nine adult evening classes meeting in five small rural schools in Supervisory District No. 1, serving the area in Ulster county surrounding the city of Kingston.

In addition, several classes in automobile driving are being planned to start as soon as arrangements are completed for obtaining the properly equipped automobile.

Pastor Teaches Art

The adult program in the area's rural schools traces its beginning to a class in oil painting offered at the Rosendale village school by the Rev. Albert H. Shultis, pastor of the Rosendale Reformed Church.

The class was offered on a free basis, but the interest shown resulted about the middle of the current school year in the establishment of other classes in a variety of subjects under the state aided program.

The Rev. Mr. Shultis, in addition to his Rosendale class, now instructs an oil painting class at the Tillson school. Also at the Tillson school is a sewing class taught by Mrs. Floyd Ellsworth. This class had an original enrollment of 14, but almost immediately after it began the enrollment grew to 29.

Glasco Has Courses

At the Glasco school, there are classes in typing, with Mrs. Ann Mahoney as teacher; sewing, instructed by Miss Muriel Ferraro, and knitting, taught by Mrs. Wanda Dunham.

Mrs. Dunham also teaches a knitting class at the Emma Wygant School at Flatbush. A rug making class at the same school is taught by Mrs. Thomas Goodman.

A rug making class in the Maple Hill school is instructed by Mrs. Walter Hilterbrandt.

There is sufficient registration at the Emma Wygant school for a driver education class, and this is expected to start within the next two or three weeks. Another driver education class is being discussed for the Glasco school.

Each school district acts independently in setting up adult education programs, although in each of the districts within the area the trustees have named Reginald D. Russell as director of adult education. Russell's regular position is elementary supervisor for the Board of Cooperative Services, for the first district of Ulster county, of which Clarence A. Johnson is superintendent. The Board maintains an office at 286 Wall street, Kingston.

Popularity Grows

Although adult education programs in larger schools date back 25 or 30 years, when the classes mainly were citizenship classes for foreign-born residents, the program has become increasingly popular in recent years and particularly since World War 2.

Rural schools, however, were slower to take up the program. This was due in a large measure, Russell has explained, to the difficulties in obtaining the necessary equipment and facilities.

Before the present courses could be offered in the small schools in Ulster county's first supervisory district, arrangements had to be made, for instance, for the loan of sewing machines by the Singer Sewing Machine Company, and rental of typewriters from Ben Sklon of Kingston. Arrangements are now being made with Martin-Moran, Dodge-Plymouth dealers of Kingston, for the automobile to be used in driver training classes.

Courses meet generally one evening a week.

Costs are met by the school district with a portion of the costs being reimbursed by the state. There is no charge to the person taking the course, except that they must provide any consumable material used, such as the material for making rugs or knitted articles.

After putting down new linoleum, be sure to give it a coat of wax at once. This will seal the pores and make it wear much longer.

Snyder Says . . .

mended reading on such developments in science day by day, Snyder said that modern day science is only a record of how God does business, and that spiritual laws work as well as scientific laws.

He concluded with a saying of Indian scholars, that peace is not the absence of war but rather, peace is the presence of God. He added that Russia is a foe of God's now because she is not acquainted with Him. And he closed by urging through an anecdote of Indian justice that the citizens of Kingston have a light away from the gloom and keep the lights of civilization shining here in Kingston.

Clyde Gardner, vice president of the Dinner Club, introduced Snyder to the members amid a spontaneous round of applause, for his off-the-cuff talk. He lauded him as an "unusual friend of the Dinner Club" for coming to speak on such short notice.

Gardner announced in a short business session prior to the talk that T. W. Lane of Texas would be the next speaker, on April 28, bringing tales of keeping the law in that section as a result of 18 years as an officer of the law.

Gardner also urged that the members return as quickly as possible the cards regarding memberships in the organization for next year, so that prior planning may be done soon.

A rising vote of appreciation was given to Snyder following his talk last night. Clair Sheaffer gave the benediction closing the meeting.

O. & W. Director

informed as to the railroad because its "continuance is vital to people of the Rondout and Neversink valleys, because he is head of two businesses which depend upon it and because he is a director of the O. & W.

"Although this is not official," he said, "it is my definite understanding that there is no intention whatsoever of instituting proceedings to abandon service between Kingston and Port Jervis. This part of the O & W is getting a lot of business and paying its way."

Proceedings are being instituted to sell the entire O & W system, he said, including the Port Jervis and Kingston sections, and he explained, "the buyer will be obligated to operate for at least three years. At the end of this time, if he should wish to discontinue, he would have to obtain permission from the Interstate Commerce Commission, and it is recognized that this line operates economically and efficiently, and more than one operator of railroad short lines has expressed an interest in it, and has stood ready to buy it apart from the main line of the O & W."

Now you Know!
The answers to everyday insurance problems*
By HERMAN J. EATON

QUESTION: Recently a friend of mine died and left his wife considerable money from life insurance. Immediately she was beset by every kind of salesman and promoter trying to show her how to "invest" the money. Wouldn't it be better to have insurance paid in a regular income instead of a lump sum?
ANSWER: It all depends upon the circumstances. Family income is a good form of insurance, but it is also wise to have a stated lump sum amount payable at death to take care of immediate needs and have the balance of the policy paid in regular monthly payments.
* If you'll address your own insurance questions to this office we'll try to give you the correct answers and there will be NO CHARGE or OBLIGATION OF ANY KIND.
